

Technology management addresses the effective identification, selection, acquisition, development, exploitation and protection of technologies (product, process and infrastructure) needed to achieve, maintain [and grow] a market position and business performance in accordance with the company's objectives.

- Establishing and maintaining the linkages between technological resources and company objectives is of vital importance and represents a continuing challenge for many firms. This requires effective communication and knowledge management, supported by appropriate tools and processes of particular importance is the dialogue and understanding that needs to be established between the commercial and technological functions in the business.
- Effective technology management requires a number of management processes for identification, selection, acquisition, exploitation and protection of technology. These processes are not always very visible in firms, and are typically distributed within other business processes, such as strategy, innovation and operations.

Technology management framework, showing technology management processes (identification, selection, acquisition, exploitation and protection), business processes (strategy, innovation and operations), highlighting the dialogue that is needed between the commercial and technological functions in the business to support effective technology management

Microbial Products Mamtesh Singh,Gajendra Pratap Singh,Shivani Tyagi,2022-11-16 Microbial Products Applications and Translational Trends offers complete coverage of the production of microbial products including biopolymers biofuels bioactive compounds and their applications in fields such as bioremediation agriculture medicine and other industrial settings This book focuses on multiple processes including upstream procedures and downstream processing and the tools required for their production Lab scale development processes may not be as efficient when aiming for large scale industrial production so it is necessary to utilize in silico modeling tools for bioprocess design to ensure success at translational levels Therefore this book presents in silico and mathematical simulations and approaches used for such applications Further it examines microbial products produced from bacteria fungi and algae These major microbial categories have the capacity to produce various diverse secondary metabolites bioactive compounds enzymes biopolymers biofuels probiotics and more The bioproducts examined in the book are of great social medical and agricultural benefit and include examples of biodegradable polymers biofuels biofertilizers and drug delivery agents Presents approaches and tools that aid in the design of eco friendly efficient and economic bioprocesses Utilizes in silico and mathematical simulations for optimal bioprocess design Examines approaches to be used for bioproducts from the lab scale to widely applied microbial biotechnologies Presents the latest trends and technologies in the production approaches for microbial bio products manufacture and application This book is ideal for both researchers and academics as it provides up to date knowledge of applied microbial biotechnology approaches for bio products

Books in Print ,1991 Techne: Elements of Recent History of Information Technologies with Epistemological Conclusions Andrzej Piotr

Wierzbicki,2014-07-25 The book expresses the conviction that the art of creating tools Greek techne changes its character together with the change of civilization epochs and co determines such changes This does not mean that tools typical for a civilization epoch determine it completely but they change our way of perceiving and interpreting the world There might have been many such epochs in the history of human civilization much more than the three waves of agricultural industrial and information civilization This is expressed by the title Techne of the book where n denotes a subsequent civilization epoch During last fifty years we observed a decomposition of the old episteme understood as a way of creating and interpreting knowledge characteristic for a given civilization epoch of modernism which was an episteme typical for industrial civilization Today the world is differently understood by the representatives of three different cultural spheres of strict and natural sciences of human and social sciences especially by their part inclined towards postmodernism and technical sciences that have a different episteme than even that of strict and natural sciences Thus we observe today not two cultures but three different episteme The book consists of four parts First contains basic epistemological observations second is devoted to selected elements of recent history of information technologies third contains more detailed epistemological and general discussions fourth specifies conclusions The book is written from the cognitive perspective of technical sciences with a full awareness and discussion of its differences from the cognitive perspective of strict sciences or human and social sciences The main thesis of the book is that informational revolution will probably lead to a formation of a new episteme The book includes discussions of many issues related to such general perspective such as what is technology proper what is intuition from a perspective of technology and of evolutionary naturalism what are the reasons for and how large are the delays between a fundamental invention and its broad social utilization what is the fundamental logical error using paradoxes that are not real only apparent of the tradition of sceptical philosophy what are rational foundations and examples of emergence of order out of chaos whether civilization development based on two positive feedbacks between science technology and the market might lead inevitably to a self destruction of human civilization etc
