Managing Turbulence and Change, 1977      Managing Turbulence and Change, 1977      Reclaiming Higher Education's Purpose in Leadership Development Kathy L. Guthrie, Laura Osteen, 2016-06-20 Gain a greater understanding of leadership learning programs across disciplines pedagogies and departments This volume focuses on the collective and unique capacity in higher education to leverage and align university resources with leadership learning across college and university initiatives why we should focus on reclaiming the purpose of higher education and embrace leadership development across disciplines how we can do this and what this may look like and how we can assess this has happened This is the 174th volume of the Jossey Bass quarterly report series New Directions for Higher Education Addressed to presidents vice presidents deans and other higher education decision makers on all kinds of campuses it provides timely information and authoritative advice about major issues and administrative problems confronting every institution

Managing for Innovation Theodore S. Glickman, Susan C. White, 2007-06-29 Innovation can offer flexibility that enables institutions to adapt more readily in a constantly changing environment It is a means by which colleges and universities can address concerns typically associated with mature enterprises create tools to ease increasing cost pressures and gain efficiency through better operations and better matching of resources and requirements How best to foster innovations through supportive management is a central topic of this volume This is the 137th volume of the quarterly report series New Directions for Higher Education

Managing Change in Higher Education Douglas W. Steeples, 1990      Managing Change in Higher Education Douglas W. Steeples, 1990      The Stress of Change: Testing the Resilience of Institutions Martin Kramer, 2015-06-22 Colleges and universities have administrative and governance arrangements that can come to terms with change These can come into play to interpret and modulate change and to allow necessary adjustments through participatory processes But the capacity of these mechanisms to preserve and protect the institution is not ordinarily all that visible Gradual and decorous accommodations tend to make the working of these mechanisms largely or even wholly invisible It is a premise of this collection of essays that we need to look at highly stressful change to understand or at least get a feel for the capacity of governance administration and faculty to deal with major issues This is the 151st issue of the Jossey Bass series New Directions for Higher Education published quarterly Addressed to presidents vice presidents deans and other higher education decision makers on all kinds of campuses New Directions for Higher Education provides timely information and authoritative advice about major issues and administrative problems confronting every institution

Change Leadership in Higher Education Jeffrey L. Buller, 2014-12-02 Initiate innovation and get things done with a guide to the process of academic change Change Leadership in Higher Education is a call to action urging administrators in higher education to get proactive about change The author applies positive and creative leadership principles to the issue of leading change in higher education providing a much needed blueprint for changing the way change happens and how the system reacts Readers will examine four different models of change and look at change itself through ten different analytical lenses to highlight the areas where the current approach could be beneficially altered The book accounts for the nuances in higher education culture and environment and helps administrators see that change is natural and valuable and can be addressed in creative and innovative ways The traditional model of education has been disrupted by MOOCs faculty unions online instruction helicopter parents and much more leaving academic leaders accustomed to managing change Leading change however is unfamiliar territory This book is a guide to being proactive about change in a way that ensures a healthy future for the institution complete with models and tools that help lead the way Readers will learn to lead change instead of simply managing it Examine different models of change and redefine existing approaches Discover a blueprint for changing the process of change Analyze academic change through different lenses to gain a wider perspective Leading change involves some challenges but this useful guide is a strong conceptual and pragmatic resource for forecasting those challenges and going in prepared Administrators and faculty no longer satisfied with the status quo can look to Change Leadership in Higher Education for real actionable guidance on getting change accomplished     Technology Leadership: Communication and Information Systems in Higher Education George R. Maughan, 2001-11-16 Decisions about investments in information system infrastructure are among the most important and costly decisions campus and system administrators make A wide variety of needs must be accommodated those of students faculty and administrators themselves Different parts of the system will become obsolescent at very different rates Even those with high levels of technical expertise have been blindsided by such issues in the past This volume will help mainstream administrators think through the decision making process This is the 115th journal in the Jossey Bass series New Directions in Higher Education     The Stress of Change: Testing the Resilience of Institutions Martin Kramer, 2010-09-21 Colleges and universities have administrative and governance arrangements that can come to terms with change These can come into play to interpret and modulate change and to allow necessary adjustments through participatory processes But the capacity of these mechanisms to preserve and protect the institution is not ordinarily all that visible Gradual and decorous accommodations tend to make the working of these mechanisms largely or even wholly invisible It is a premise of this collection of essays that we need to look at highly stressful change to understand or at least get a feel for the capacity of governance administration and faculty to deal with major issues This is the 151st issue of the Jossey Bass series New Directions for Higher Education published quarterly Addressed to presidents vice presidents deans and other higher education decision makers on all kinds of campuses New Directions for Higher Education provides timely information and authoritative advice about major issues and administrative problems confronting every institution     Restructuring Shared Governance in Higher Education William G. Tierney, Vincente M. Lechuga, 2004-09-17 Shared governance has been a hallmark of higher education in the United States since the early twentieth century Since its inception faculty administrators trustees and other interested parties have either bemoaned or celebrated the idea We offer a variety of viewpoints that bring to light various ways to think of shared governance The intent is to foment dialogue and debate about the shape of shared governance for the future Our assumption is that many challenges are at academe's doorstep that may require significant changes If those of us who work in colleges and universities are not well organized to deal with those challenges the solutions that we develop will be love's labors lost Governance is the means to implementing ideas that either respond to problems or provide new strategies If academic governance is ineffective then it needs to be reformed The shape of those reforms is what the authors of this volume consider Chapters address the subject of shared governance from several perspectives including partnerships between the state and higher education disjointed governance in university centers and institutes a cultural perspective on communication and governance and balancing governance structures with leadership and trust Contributors also explore a conceptual framework of faculty trust and participation in governance This is the 127th issue of the Jossey Bass quarterly report series New Directions for Higher Education

Transitions Between Faculty and Administrative Careers Ronald J. Henry, 2006-08-04 Providing extensive real life examples Transitions Between Faculty and Administrative Careers delves into the main challenges of transitioning between faculty and administrative careers Issues such as building a diverse support team developing flexible management skills to enhance all types of professional relationships actively bridging academe and administration and articulating your vision among others are discussed in detail This is the 134th volume of the quarterly report New Directions for Higher Education published by Jossey Bass Click here to view the entire listing of issues from New Directions for Higher Education

Narum, Kate Conover, 2002-10-11 Acknowledging the growing national need for a well equipped talent pool from which the scientific technical and engineering workforce in the twenty first century will be drawn this volume examines ways that trustees presidents provosts and deans can commit to national objectives and translate them into action at the local level It challenges academic leaders to take immediate and informed action to guarantee undergraduate access to programs of the highest quality that prepare them for life and work in the world beyond the campus All undergraduates in these early decades of the twenty first century need access to robust and engaging learning experiences that provide a deep understanding of the nature of science and the scientific process alert them to the power and potential of science and technology in their world make them facile with numbers and data and the use of technologies and prepare them for responsible citizenship in a world dominated by science and technology All students no matter what their background need access to a research rich discovery based learning environment in which they are motivated to consider a career using scientific and technological capabilities

perhaps as a K 12 teacher an academic scientist or engineer or in the high tech industrial community This is the 119th issue in the Jossey Bass higher education series New Directions for Higher Education New Directions for Higher Education - Vol. 159, 2011 Transformational Change in Higher Education Madeleine d'Ambrosio, Ronald G. Ehrenberg, 2007 This is a compelling and important text that presents both the complexity and the barriers confronting higher education in this global moment Solutions will prize innovation resilient leadership unifying diverse campus subcultures and most certainly intellectual and academic integrity This text begins to outline the new agenda Richard Guarasci Wagner College US In Transformational Change in Higher Education the TIAA CREF Institute has brought together some of today's best minds to address the issues that every educational leader and policy maker should be thinking about The topics range from financing to competition to financial aid to costs and pricing to faculty turnover to accountability to the roles presidents and boards must play Lessons in transformation are provided by respected leaders from all segments of higher education George R Boggs American Association of Community Colleges US This is essential reading for everyone who cares about the future of higher education and is a priceless reference for those who are its leaders The conversations not only cover each issue from a national perspective but also consider the specific strategies that have been employed by individual institutions to address it Thus the volume is at the same time both reflective and practical Sharon P Smith University of Pittsburgh at Greensburg US This volume delves into the financing of institutional operations with entrepreneurial leaders and is a useful addition to any university administrator's reading list if they are struggling with modern financial challenges David W Pershing University of Utah US The volume part of the TIAA CREF Institute Series on Higher Education is based on a national conference Transformational Change in Higher Education Positioning Your Institution for Future Success which was convened by the TIAA CREF Institute in November 2006 This unique volume discusses the management of transformational change in higher education as a key element of success With input from researchers presidents provosts and other senior leaders of the higher education community this edited volume explores transformational change in a range of institutions from small teaching and community colleges to large comprehensive research universities The role of entrepreneurial leaders and their interactions with trustees policymakers and the public are discussed as are strategic issues such as financing college and university operations and student access as related to pricing The editors maintain that managing change in these areas impacts both an institution's balance sheet and ultimate success in realizing its vision In this book higher education presidents chancellors provosts CFOs and governing boards will find new and actionable information to enhance decision making and inform strategic planning Association leadership will be provided with a deeper understanding of the challenges faced by their membership and possible responses Researchers and practitioners in education public policy business management and entrepreneurship interested in the business of higher education will find much of value The First Year and Beyond: Rethinking the Challenge of Collegiate Transition Betsy O. Barefoot, 2008-12-31 The transitions that happen before after and during the undergraduate college experience are the subject of this volume transitions that are experienced by students and sometimes their parents and guided by educators The topic of collegiate transitions has been a primary focus of higher education literature and research over the past twenty five years But almost all of this attention has centered on the first year the transition period when students are most likely to drop out of college In spite of its importance to students and institutions the first year is not only the significant transition period that affects student success This volume expands the lens to include a view of transitions that precede and follow the traditional first year as well as the critical junctures throughout the undergraduate years that promote or impede student progress to a degree Chapters discuss Rethinking College Readiness Blending High School and College Rethinking the Transition New Challenges in Working with Traditional Aged College Students From Helicopter Parent to Valued Partner Shaping the Parental Relationship for Student Success Adult Students in Higher Education A Portrait of Transitions Sophomores in Transition The Forgotten Year Feeling like a Freshman Again The Transfer Student Transition Institutional Efforts to Move Seniors Through and Beyond College College Transitions The Other Side of the Story Taken as a whole this volume describes a continuum of the college or university experience through the framework of student transition Depending on the characteristics of the students their entry points and their subsequent decisions the nature of the college experience will be different But student success from entry to degree attainment also depends in great measure on the willingness of institutions to be supportive of and accountable for student progress in through and ultimately out of college This is the 144th volume of the Jossey Bass quarterly report series New Directions for Higher Education Addressed to presidents vice presidents deans and other higher education decision makers on all kinds of campuses New Directions for Higher Education provides timely information and authoritative advice about major issues and administrative problems confronting every institution

Reconceptualizing the Collegiate Ideal

J. Douglas Toma, 1999-06-10 Has the traditional notion of college as a physical place where campus life is an integral part of the college experience become irrelevant or impractical This volume of New Directions for Higher Education explores how administration student affairs and faculty work can work together to redefine the collegiate ideal incorporating the developmental needs of a diverse student body and the changes in higher education's delivery and purpose The authors discuss how faculty incentives can be reshaped to recognize their contributions to student development how student affairs programs and services can better serve non traditional students and how modified curricular structures such as service learning and learning communities can benefit a diverse student body This is the 105th issue of the quarterly journal New Directions for Higher Education
