

WHAT DID NEWCOMER AND LONGER-TERM IMMIGRANTS HAVE TO SAY?

Toronto is one of the most multicultural cities in the world. In 2006, over 40,000 new immigrants to Canada (16%) were between the ages of 15 and 24 years. More than two-thirds of these immigrant youth settled in Toronto, Vancouver or Montreal<sup>1</sup>. Young immigrants are a driving force behind economic and population growth, so their successful integration into Canadian society is crucial. Access to fair and appropriate health care and other social services is one of the first steps towards this process, especially in the first few years after arrival.

Service providers who work with immigrant youth face a very diverse group. Youth come from many different countries and cultural backgrounds. Some immigrant youth have been in Canada since they were very young and so are more familiar with how things work and speak English/French fluently. Some live away from Canada during their teen years and are less knowledgeable about community services and less proficient in English. Some choose to migrate, while others are forced to due to war, religion or sexual orientation. All of these factors, among others, influence how youth access services.

WHAT WE FOUND IN THE TORONTO TEEN SURVEY<sup>2</sup>

- Both longer-term immigrants and newcomers are less likely to access sexual health services than second generation<sup>3</sup> Canadian youth.
- Newcomer youth are less likely than longer-term immigrants and second generation<sup>3</sup> Canadian youth to receive any formal sex education.
- Newcomer youth defined 'linguistically accessible services' as places where they are able to ask questions and can relate to their interpreter.
- Newcomer youth turn to TV, radio, newspapers and magazines for sex questions answered but they would prefer to get this information in other ways.

WHO ARE WE?

The Toronto Teen Survey (TTS) is a community-based research project that has gathered information on assets, gaps and barriers that currently exist in sexual health education and services for teens. Between December 2008 and November 2009, we collected over 1,200 surveys and spoke with 118 teens and 50 of their service providers. This sample is the largest community-based youth sample of its kind in Toronto, Canada's most diverse urban centre.

The goal of the TTS is to enrich both the quality and quantity of sexual health information available to Toronto teens and improve the ways in which sexual health promotion and care is delivered. The information provided in this bulletin is intended to help service providers enhance sexual health care services to the newcomer and longer-term immigrant teens they serve. It was developed in collaboration with the Ontario Council of Agencies Serving Immigrants.

WHO DID WE TALK TO?

12% are newcomers: Participants whose parent(s) are immigrants and who have come to Canada in the last three years.

50% are longer-term immigrants: Participants whose parent(s) are immigrants and who have been in Canada for at least four years.

38% are second generation<sup>3</sup> Canadian: Participants who were both born in Canada and had parents who were also born in Canada.

Teens came from very diverse ethnic and cultural backgrounds. China, The Philippines and Pakistan were the top 3 countries of origin.

Half of the newcomer and longer-term immigrant teens identified as male, 47 and 49% as female.

Teens not born in Canada tended to be slightly older.
