For many years psychotherapy has been used as one of the basic approaches in the treatment and care of neurological and mental illnesses. The last decades have seen a change of focus in the treatment of psychiatric patients; increasing attention has been paid to biological treatments. Regrettably, the nursing profession in the context of the undergraduate and graduate levels has not been an exception for this drift, having left aside those essential frameworks in terms of an interpersonal relationship and therapeutic approach that are pivotal in the nursing care. It can be said that the beginning of the entry of nurses into the field of psychotherapy was the presentation of the theory of therapeutic communication by Dr. Hilgard Peplau. He taught effective communication with patients and also the roles of nurses in the best way. In fact, psychotherapy is a type of planned therapeutic conversation that is carried out to create mental health and move towards recovery. In psychotherapy, the psychotherapist must constantly think and reflect on themselves, their role in the evolutionary process created, and also the person under care. This effective therapeutic relationship develops the nurse's competencies and skills and transfers them to others. This book provides good knowledge in the process of establishing a therapeutic relationship, psychotherapy, and moving towards improving mental health for both clients and nurse therapists, so studying it will be helpful in understanding and applying more of the concepts of psychotherapy and helping to improve nurses' knowledge in this field. Nursing Informatics for the Advanced Practice Nurse Susan McBride, Mari Tietze, 2015-12-03

Designed specifically for graduate-level nursing informatics courses, this is the first text to focus on using technology with an interprofessional team to improve patient care and safety. It delivers an expansive and innovative approach to devising practical methods of optimizing technology to foster quality of patient care and support population health initiatives. Based on the requirements of the DNP Essential IV Core Competency for Informatics and aligning with federal policy health initiatives, the book describes models of information technology the authors have successfully used in health IT as well as data and analytics used in business for profit industry and not-for-profit health care association settings, which they have adapted for nursing practice in order to foster optimal patient outcomes. The authors espouse a hybrid approach to teaching with a merged competency and concept-based curriculum. With an emphasis on the benefits of an interprofessional team, the book describes the most effective approaches to health care delivery using health information technology. It describes a nursing informatics model that is comprised of three core domains: point of care, technology, data management, and analytics, and patient safety and quality. The book also includes information on point of care applications, population health, data management, and integrity and privacy and security. New and emerging technologies explored include genomics, nanotechnology, artificial intelligence, and data mining. Case studies and critical thinking exercises support the concept-based curriculum and facilitate out-of-the-box thinking. Supplemental materials for instructors include PowerPoint slides and a test bank. While targeted primarily for the
