London populated by solitary minds rather than a unified community Clarissa Dalloway spends her day organizing a party moving through upscale London streets as Big Ben tolls the passing hours Outwardly she is the picture of composure and grace a middle aged woman fulfilling her social duties Yet her internal monologue continually drifts to existential reflections her memories of youth an old suitor's return and an unshakable awareness of mortality that lurks behind her polite smiles In a parallel narrative Septimus Warren Smith a young veteran suffering from shell shock walks the same city haunted by hallucinations and an inescapable sense of doom Though Clarissa and Septimus never meet the contrast between her guarded emptiness and his unraveling sanity forms the dark heart of the novel By evening Septimus has taken his own life to escape the torment in his head and news of this suicide reaches Clarissa's party stirring in her a subdued recognition of kinship with the lost stranger Woolf's narrative technique in Mrs Dalloway dissolves the boundaries between past and present between one character's thoughts and the next The narrative glides from Clarissa to the people she encounters capturing each mind's momentary impressions This fluid shifting of consciousness creates a mosaic of isolated interior worlds even in conversation characters remain locked in their personal realities The novel pointedly refrains from moralizing about its subjects High society chatter about dresses and politics is placed alongside Septimus's hallucinated dialogues with ghosts yet neither is depicted as more real or important than the other Instead the coexistence of trivial daily concerns with unspeakable inner despair underscores a collapse of any shared value system Mrs Dalloway offers no comforting resolution at its close Clarissa continues with her party carrying only a quiet ambiguous insight from Septimus's fate The lasting impression is of life's delicate veneer beneath which every soul confronts alone the encroaching darkness of death and meaninglessness

The Hours / Mrs. Dalloway Michael Cunningham, Virginia Woolf, 2022-05-03 Michael Cunningham brings together his Pulitzer Prize winning novel with the masterpiece that inspired it: Virginia Woolf's Mrs Dalloway. In The Hours, the acclaimed author Michael Cunningham draws inventively on the life and work of Virginia Woolf and the story of her novel Mrs Dalloway to tell the story of a group of contemporary characters struggling with the conflicting claims of love and inheritance, hope and despair. In this edition, Cunningham brings his own Pulitzer Prize winning novel together with Woolf's masterpiece, which has long been hailed as a groundbreaking work of literary fiction and one of the finest novels written in English. The two novels published side by side with a new introduction by Cunningham display the extent of their affinity and each illuminates new facets of the other in this joint volume. In his introduction, Cunningham re-creates the wonderment of his first encounter with Mrs Dalloway at fifteen as he writes: "I was lost. I was gone. I never recovered." With this edition, Cunningham allows us to disappear into the world of Woolf and into his own brilliant mind.
