Nutritional And Toxicological Aspects Of Food Processing:

Nutritional and Toxicological Aspects of Food Processing Ronald Walker, E. Quattrucci, 1988 Nutritional and Toxicological Consequences of Food Processing Mendel Friedman, 2013-11-21 A variety of processing methods are used to make foods edible to permit storage to alter texture and flavor to sterilize and pasteurize food and to destroy microorganisms and other toxins. These methods include baking, broiling, cooking, freezing, frying, and roasting. Many such efforts have both beneficial and harmful effects. It is a paradox of nature that the processing of foods can improve nutrition, quality, safety, and taste and yet occasionally lead to the formation of anti-nutritional and toxic compounds. These multifaceted consequences of food processing arise from molecular interactions among nutrients with each other and with other food ingredients. Since beneficial and adverse effects of food processing are of increasing importance to food science, nutrition, and human health and since many of the compounds formed have been shown to be potent carcinogens and growth inhibitors in animals, I organized a symposium broadly concerned with the nutritional and toxicological consequences of food processing. The symposium was sponsored by the American Institute of Nutrition (AIN) and the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology (FASEB) for its annual meeting in Washington, D.C., April 1-5, 1990. Invited speakers were asked to develop at least one of the following topics: 1. Nutrient-nutrient interactions between amino acids, proteins, carbohydrates, lipids, minerals, vitamins, tannins, fiber, natural toxicants, etc. 2. Effects of radiation. 3. Thermally induced formation of dietary mutagens, antimutagens, carcinogens, anticarcinogens, antioxidants, and growth inhibitors. 4. Effects of pH on nutritional value and safety.

Nutritional and Toxicological Aspects of Food Safety Mendel Friedman, 2012-12-06 Naturally occurring antinutrients and food toxicants and those formed during food processing adversely affect the nutritional quality and safety of foods. Because of the need to improve food quality and safety by plant breeding, fortification with appropriate nutrients, and processing methods, and because of the growing concern about possible direct relationships between diet and diseases, research is needed to: 1. evaluate the nutritive quality and safety of crops and fortified, supplemented, and processed foods; 2. define conditions that favor or minimize the formation of nutritionally antagonistic and toxic compounds in foods; and 3. define the toxicology, metabolism, and mechanisms of the action of food ingredients and their metabolites. As scientists interested in improving the safety of the food supply, we are challenged to respond to the general need for exploring: 1. possible adverse consequences of antinutrients and food toxicants; and 2. factors which contribute to the formation and inactivation of undesirable compounds in foods. Medical research offers an excellent analogy. Studies on causes and mechanisms of disease processes are nearly always accompanied by parallel studies on preventive measures and cures. Such an approach offers the greatest possible benefits to the public. Physico-Chemical Aspects of Food Processing S.T. Beckett, 1995 This book provides an in-depth study of the changes which occur in the components of food when they are subjected to processing. The book is divided into two distinct parts: in the first part, the fundamental changes are examined from a scientific point of view.

These include Vapor pressure and water activity Glass transition Emulsion technology Maillard Browning reaction Rheology Foams Gells and gelling Fat eutectics and crystallization Surface effects Fermentation Change in cell structure In the second part of the book these changes are reviewed as to how they are important to different parts of the food industry Chapters included concern Dairy products Cakes baking and bread making Meat and fish Fruits and vegetables Preserves and jellies Sugar and confectionery Chocolate Extruded products Sauces pickles and condiments Alcoholic drinks and Multicomponent products The Maillard Reaction in Food Processing, Human Nutrition and Physiology P. Finot,1990-03
