Topping, 2025-08-05 Modern practice in the 1980s was to involve parents increasingly in the education of their children and was supported by legislation. Particularly when children had special needs, parents required structured training and support to ensure they affectively sustained their vital role as educators at home. Many large scale programmes to provide this had been developed throughout the world at the time for example Home Start, Portage, Home Visiting Projects and Paired Reading Projects. However not all of these had been thoroughly evaluated and the existing literature was scattered and difficult to access. Some projects demonstrated spectacular results and high cost effectiveness while others proved more disappointing. Originally published in 1986, this book critically analyses over 600 international English language research reports on the effectiveness of parent training programmes. In addition a detailed guide to the practicalities of planning projects is provided together with a comprehensive directory of useful resource materials. After an introductory overview the evidence on the effects on child progress of parental involvement in school activities is reviewed as is research on the impact of schemes of regular structured communication between home and school. Programmes designed to train parents to accelerate the development of their children at home are considered in the subsequent chapters starting with ordinary children. Much of the book reviews projects targeted on children with some sort of special educational need from children whose special needs stem from a widespread difficulty such as poverty or second language learning systematically through to children whose needs stem from rarer and more severe issues. Each chapter has its own summary for ease of reader use while an overall summary chapter points out best buys and directions for future developments. This volume will be of major interest to teachers, psychologists, social workers, community health personnel, community educationalists, researchers, many others working with parents and children and to some parents themselves. This book is a re-issue originally published in 1986. The language used is a reflection of its era and no offence is meant by the Publishers to any reader by this re-publication.

Handbook on Parent Education Marvin J. Fine, 2014-05-10. Handbook on Parent Education presents a contemporary picture of the state of the parent education movement. It tackles a number of critical issues such as the programs that are available or when parent education should begin. Different models of parent education are described along with parenting programs for youth. The application of parenting programs for specific groups including foster parents, parents of preschoolers, abusive parents and parents of handicapped children is also discussed. Comprised of 14 chapters, this book begins with an overview of the parent education movement as well as several prototype programs and some ethical issues. The distinction between education and therapy is explained and parent education with special interest groups is described. In addition, problems of research and evaluation and a projection for the future are presented. Subsequent chapters focus on the state of the nuclear family in American society during the 1970s, Rudolf Dreikurs' impact on childrearing practices and his contribution to individual psychology together with the social context of child behavior, Haim Ginott's approach to parent education and the effects of parent effectiveness training on families. Transactional analysis approaches to parent education and parent education as a strategy for the prevention of child abuse are also examined. This monograph will appeal to task of examining the role of hegemonic masculinities in propping up a normative social order in which children are constructed as the property of adults By examining adult child relations in the context of a wide range of family forms and social contexts the book provides some hard answers to questions relating to what exactly are the best interests of children and how they should be determined The book responds by suggesting that there is a pressing need to recognise the capacity of children to voice their own desires and needs and that in failing to recognise this all adults and men in particular only serve to further perpetuate a possessive logic that at least in part gives rise to the mistreatment or abuse of children Covering topics such as the experiences of foster fathers gay adoptive fathers and sperm donors and exploring phenomena such as books on raising boys and movies about gay parents the book offers important insights as to the operations of hegemony in the lives of a broad range of men Importantly the book moves beyond simply identifying the operations of hegemony in relation to possessive investments in children and goes on to propose a non indifferent approach to understanding adult child relations that at its heart examines the operations of power that produce children as supposedly docile subjects and only certain adults as capable of caring for them As a result the book makes a significant contribution to setting an alternative agenda for child protection both within Australia and internationally by asking the question protection for whom
