English, Colonial, Modern and Maori Anna Crichton, 2014-11-24 How and why do works make their way into a public art collection Who decides what will be hung on the walls placed on plinths displayed in cases These important but seldom discussed questions lie at the heart of this cultural biography of the 70 years during which the Robert

McDougall Art Gallery was Christchurch's civic art gallery. The book explains how the collection came together, how it developed, and how the public and artists and critics reacted to it. The book is presented in three parts, each of which has its own introduction. It provides an analytical framework in detail and in context by defining terms and explaining particular recurrent concepts. These include and indeed highlight selection and presentation cultures derived from the core museological functions of collection and display. These together with the framework's other concepts are related to mainstream methodology in the social sciences, particularly political science. The latter is especially relevant to the study of a public art gallery owned and funded by the public and its elected representatives and controlled by these representatives and their appointed agents. Furthermore, the framework explores the concept of post-colonial tensions between heritages, specifically indigenous, transplanted, and autochthonous ones. The significance of this becomes more apparent when the concepts used in relevant previous studies of specific public art galleries in New Zealand are reviewed. There is also a strong emphasis on the development of a public Maori art collection. It is a story too of vivid and influential personalities, the directors and curators who fought for the gallery and the artists represented in it. But the book is more than just the story of a single gallery's collection; it shines a light on concerns and patterns that will be familiar to galleries everywhere and provides a unique perspective on New Zealand's cultural development over much of the twentieth century. Bill Culbert

Ian Wedde, 2009. Bill Culbert is one of New Zealand's most celebrated artists. In Bill Culbert Making Light Work, the first substantial book on Culbert, Ian Wedde explores the ideas, materials, and conditions that have formed Culbert's art over the past 50 years. Bill Culbert grew up in Port Chalmers and Wellington but since 1961 has lived largely in France and England, although he returns regularly to New Zealand to exhibit work during the oyster and whitebait seasons. Light has preoccupied Culbert since his days as a student at London's Royal College of Art in the late 1950s. He has used it in domestic scaled works, in dazzling large-scale museum installations, and in public spaces such as the Champs Elysees in Paris and the Millennium Dome in London. Ian Wedde suggests in Bill Culbert that energy and travel, congeniality and conviviality are also key to understanding of Culbert's immensely attractive but conceptually rigorous work: from his wall-mounted light sculptures made of cool white fluorescent tubes and coloured plastic containers, his installations of objects from the local dump, his battered suitcases, wheels, light bulbs, bottles, and wine glasses pouring light. Culbert is also a generous artist, acknowledging the importance of collaborators, locations, situations at a moment in time, the wider culture, and viewers. Thoughtful, compelling, and extensively illustrated, Bill Culbert Making Light Work is an assured participant in this conversation, and readers will relish the opportunity to share in it. Landfall Charles Brasch, 2006. Cultures of decolonisation Ruth Craggs, Claire Wintle, 2016-01-01. Cultures of decolonisation combines studies of visual, literary, and material cultures in order to explore the complexities of the end of empire as a process. Where other accounts focus on high politics and constitutional reform, this volume reveals the diverse ways in which cultures contributed to wider political, economic, and social change. This book demonstrates the transnational character of decolonisation thereby illustrating the value of comparison between different cultural forms and diverse places in understanding the nature of this wide reaching geopolitical change Individual chapters focus on architecture theatre museums heritage sites fine art and interior design alongside institutions such as artists groups language agencies and the Royal Mint across Africa Asia the Caribbean and Europe Offering a range of disciplinary perspectives these contributions provide revealing case studies for those researching decolonisation across the humanities and social sciences
