Practice Adam Geczy,Vicki Karaminas,2017-02-09 There is a new form of design practice within the contemporary fashion industry which is active in complex forms of social commentary and critique While fashion in the modernist era has shown signs of criticism and subversion these were either in the form of subcultures or perversions such as punk or BDSM styling Today however these genres have been absorbed into the fashion industry itself meaning that critical fashion is now far from limited to the subcultures from which it came This book explores this new space for criticism within the popular fashion sphere to demonstrate how designers are disrupting conventions challenging beliefs and stirring change from within the system itself Critical Fashion Practice considers a range of contemporary designers across the globe from the US to Japan whose conceptual designs embody this critical language including case studies such as Rei Kawakubo s deconstructive silhouettes for Comme des Gar ons and Walter Van Beirendonck s sadomasochistic menswear collections amongst other key players such as Miuccia Prada Vivienne Westwood and Viktor Rolf Arguing that the rise of critical fashion coincides with a noticeable decline in the criticality of art Geczy and Karaminas go beyond slotting fashion into previously established art theories Conceiving a new cultural role for fashion that affords insight into identity class race sexuality and gender this book shows how fashion can not only reflect and comment on but can also be a part of social change workshop where members of the group produced challenging conceptual art work. Subsequently work was sold and is now held in major galleries around the world. Through their visual practices many members of the group overcame feelings of rejection and alienation and developed self assurance and confidence. John Johnston works with the Protestant communities in Belfast and through the use of visual practices he has been working with young people in a variety of community sites to explore issues of identity. This is a difficult educational challenge given the history of Northern Ireland. Recently he has been invited to work in Lebanon at a human rights summer school. He has been working with young people there to explore themes of home and belonging through visual practices. Room 13 consists of a highly creative group of children at Caol Primary School near Fort William in Scotland. The children are producing contemporary art which has received much interest and acclaim nationally and internationally. The children run Room 13 as an entirely self funding business independent from the school. Rob Fairley and Claire Gibb are the only adults involved; they offer advice but they are not the children's teachers. An elected committee of children makes all decisions about the work and the business. Viv Golding is a lecturer in museum studies at Leicester University. She uses the concept of museum clearing to counter the discourses of lack, often a self fulfilling prophecy that frequently permeates much discussion of Black children and their under achievement in UK schools today. The practical value of her critique is illustrated through a fieldwork project involving imaginative art and literacy school and museum work in south London with early years children. Deidre Prins and her team work as education officers at Robben Island Museum in South Africa. They provide some background to the work of the museum and introduce readers briefly to the legacy of creative forms used in the maximum security prison between 1960s and 1991 and the role it played in creating a process of normalization under conditions that were repressive and alienating. A large part of the audiences of Robben Island Museum are children and youth. All of them have no memory or experience of the colonial period in RSA history and very few of them have a memory or experience of apartheid. These are two defining periods in the lives of all South Africans with the scars, benefits and joys of a new democracy. To create a dynamic learning environment in which children and youth can engage with a legacy which is at once painful and liberatory requires a process of making memory, speaking about the past, doing the past and understanding the past. Their engagement with this past in turn creates their own memories and leaves its mark on Robben Island which is a living museum. The theme of memory making will be described through the production of a photographic collage which is part of the annual Spring School activities. 198 Gallery: The team at the 198 Gallery write about their work on the Urban Visions scheme which is an outreach programme that deals with disaffected youth in south London. Lucy Davies, the chief administrator and other gallery staff will write about how their program has impacted on the learning experience of children from this diverse urban environment. Many are excluded from schools or have learning difficulties which schools find difficult to address. The gallery in its work across a range of media but more especially electronic media has earned the respect of many in educational and fine art circles both in this country and
