

Chapter 1: Introduction

1. Distinguish between assigned and emergent leaders.
 - Assigned leaders would be exactly what they are named. People in position of power and responsibility, probably someone who has prior leadership experience and who is hopefully qualified for what / who they are leading. An emergent leader would be chosen by the group that is being lead. A person that the group feels trust that gets involved.
2. Contrast leaders and managers from Kotter's perspective, then from Zaleznik's perspective.
 - Kotter's perspective on management is that managers are there to be the backbone. They have the knowledge on the business and are there to keep the business functioning as it should
 - Kotter's perspective on leadership is that leaders are more hands on and involved. They work to help change the business when needed and help the business stay adaptive and provides well a leader.
 - Zaleznik's perspective on management is that they don't have much of an emotional connection to the work. Managers are there to know what to do when no one else does and to fix things.
 - Zaleznik's perspective on leadership is that they are emotionally invested in their projects. They would rather create a solution to the problem in an expansive way then do the same fix.
3. Can someone be a leader and a manager?
 - In my opinion yes, I believe someone can take on both roles. Not necessarily at the same time but people change and adapt based on the people they are with and the situation or project at hand.

Chapter 2: Trait Approach

1. What are the "Big Five" personality factors?
 - Neuroticism – Extraversion – Openness – Agreeableness – Conscientiousness
2. How do they affect your leadership abilities and capabilities?
 - Every good leader must be agreeable and open; these traits work together to create a good leader. Without the ability to be sociable you won't be able to lead, a leader has to be some sort of assertive. Creativity makes a leader fun and exciting, organization is important for your group members to keep them on track and so they know what they are doing.
3. Which factor(s) was most strongly associated with leadership?

The Relationship Between Chaotic Events and Credit Union Leadership Practices Dr. Paul Withey, 2015-06-01

Organizational crises in modern society requires an immediate response Chaotic stages occur during organizational changes resulting in emotional experiences for leaders who develop intense feelings of anger shock and frustration Leaders who are not prepared will be overwhelmed by the need for an aggressive response to change The ability to solve problems successfully will increase movement of the organization though the chaos stage Building a foundation of preparation for a leader prior to the organizational change stage will decrease levels of dysfunction the organization may experience It is time for a new approach to managing organizational chaos The research in this book provides original contributions to leadership studies by applying general systems and chaos theory to leadership behaviors in times of crisis Chaos theory offers different perspectives that will allow leaders to develop capacities for changing their existing approaches to chaotic events Results from the research in this study are valuable to credit union leaders and also all business leaders who need new models that recognize external factors influencing the sustainability of the organization This adaptability is one of the most effective leadership skills a leader can display Higgs Rowland 2005 Introducing general systems and chaos theory into organizational leadership has become a new approach to leadership psychology and philosophy promising to influence leadership and management theories Burns 2002 The significance of chaos theory for leadership studies lies in its heuristic power If the challenges to normal events are observed through the lens of chaos theory organizational leaders may make better informed decisions in times of uncertainty

Controversy between Certain Carriers and Certain of their Employees,1962 Gender and Leadership in Unions Gill Kirton,Geraldine Mary Healy,2013 Reflecting the increased attention to gender and women in the field of employment relations there is now a growing international literature on women and trade unions The interest in women as trade unionists arises partly from the fact that women comprise 40 percent of trade union membership in the USA and over 50 percent in the UK Further despite considerable overall union membership decline in both the UK and USA more women than men are joining unions in both countries Recognition of the importance of women to the survival and revival of trade union movements has in many cases produced an unprecedented commitment to equality and inclusion at the highest level Yet the challenge is to ensure that this commitment is translated to action and improves the experience of women in their union and in their workplace Gender and Leadership in Trade Unions explores and evaluates the similarities and differences in equality strategies pursued by unions in the US and the UK It assesses the conditions experienced by women union members and how these impact on their leadership both potential and actual Women have made gains in both countries within union leadership and decision making structures however climbing the ladder to leadership positions remains far from a smooth process In the trade union context women face multiple barriers that resonate with the barriers facing aspiring women leaders in other organizational contexts including the gendered division of domestic work the organization and nature of women s work the organization and nature of trade union work and the masculine culture of trade unions The discussion of women trade union leaders is situated more broadly within debates on governance leadership and democracy within social justice activism
