Barron,2000-11-09 Mixed Harvest explores rural responses to the transformation of the northern United States from an agricultural society into an urban and industrial one According to Hal S Barron country people from New England to North Dakota negotiated the rise of large scale organizational society and consumer culture in ways marked by both resistance and accommodation change and continuity Between 1870 and 1930 communities in the rural North faced a number of challenges Reformers and professionals sought to centralize authority and diminish local control over such important aspects of rural society as schools and roads large scale business corporations wielded increasing market power to the detriment of independent family farmers and an encroaching urban based consumer culture threatened rural beliefs in the primacy of their local communities and the superiority of country life But Barron argues by reconfiguring traditional rural values of localism independence republicanism and agrarian fundamentalism country people successfully created a distinct rural subculture Consequently agrarian society continued to provide a counterpoint to the dominant trends in American society well into the twentieth century
