Although referring to agglomeration as a generic term is convenient it should be noted that the concept of economic agglomeration refers to distinct real world situations. The main focus of the treatment is on cities but it also explores the formation of agglomerations such as commercial districts within cities, industrial clusters at the regional level and the existence of imbalance between regions. The book is rooted within the realm of modern economics and borrows concepts from geography and regional science which makes it accessible to a broad audience formed by economists, geographers, regional planners and other scientists. It may be used in coursework for graduate students and upper level undergraduates. Challenge

Magazine New York University. Institute of Economic Affairs, 1986. Studies in Labor Market Dynamics G. R. Neumann, N. C. Westergaard-Nielsen, 2012-12-06. This volume consists of papers presented at a conference on labor market theory held in August 1982 at Sandbjerg, a manor house situated in Sønderjylland owned by University of Aarhus. The conference was arranged to mark the start of a labor market research project utilizing the first Danish longitudinal data set. The conference was meant to present a survey of the recent developments within labor market theory where unemployment at a given time is seen as a result of flows of individuals between the various labor market states. Consequently almost all papers deal with aspects of transitions on the labor market. The first paper by Andersen discusses from a statistician's point of view how it is possible to analyze longitudinal data on labor market dynamics using statistical models for multivariate counting processes. Models including general calendar time specific intensities and models specifying the distribution of spell lengths as well as their combinations are included. Finally it is demonstrated how the effect of exogenous, endogenous and other time dependent variables can be modeled. This paper does also contain an example of the application of the model.
