Memories Of Maggie:

Memories of Maggie Iain Dale,2000 Memories of Maggie Rupert Matthews,Barbara Hayes,2013-05-16 The Book of Scattered Memories E D Beaty,2015-03-30 What the hell happened to Maggie? Memory and History of Race in Toni Morrisons's "Recitatif" Janina Madlener,2018-03-21 Seminar paper from the year 2015 in the subject American Studies Literature grade 1 3 University of Constance language English abstract On all of its levels memory is defined by an intricate interaction between remembering and forgetting This statement certainly includes the term race a term that has for a long time been very present in American history and is still of high importance today Toni Morrison deals to a great extent with this term in her writings for example her only short story Recitatif where two girls of different races witness a beating incident in the orphanage St Bonny s they live in and who in the course of the story revisit their memories of the incident several times In the 20th century many analyses of Recitatif therefore focused on putting racial markers on the two protagonists showing how Morrison wants to make her readers aware of their own racial stereotypes This approach is justified and certainly reveals much of Morrison s intention as the author but I suggest that the story does not merely deal with racial markers Hence this paper will focus on a character that has often been left out Maggie the kitchen worker of St Bonny s Androne Stanley and Benjamin are major voices in a small body of Recitatif scholarship that centre on Maggie Androne offered a ground breaking study focusing on maternal figures whereas Stanley analyses the story in the light of disability studies Thus it will be shown that Maggie has several functions in the text that add to the meaning of the text as well as the understanding for the reader This paper will investigate Recitatif in the light of the concepts of memory and history I claim that through the character of Maggie readers can better understand the memory and history of the term race in American history It will be shown how the returning and dividing memories of the incident with Maggie challenge Twyla and Roberta to not accept their memory as complete Furthermore it will be shown that Maggie s interstitial narrative provides at least to a certain extent answers to the implied question driving Recitatif if memory is so unstable how can whites and blacks ever communicate effectively about the history they share George Eliot and Nineteenth-Century Psychology Michael Davis,2016-12-05 In his study of Eliot as a psychological novelist Michael Davis examines Eliot s writings in the context of a large volume of nineteenth century scientific writing about the mind Eliot Davis argues manipulated scientific language in often subversive ways to propose a vision of mind as both fundamentally connected to the external world and radically isolated from and independent of that world In showing the alignments between Eliot s work and the formulations of such key thinkers as Herbert Spencer Charles Darwin T H Huxley and G H Lewes Davis reveals how Eliot responds both creatively and critically to contemporary theories of mind as she explores such fundamental issues as the mind body relationship the mind in evolutionary theory the significance of reason and emotion and consciousness Davis also points to important parallels between Eliot s work and new and future developments in psychology particularly in the work of William

James In Middlemarch for example Eliot demonstrates more clearly than either Lewes or James the way the conscious self is shaped by language Davis concludes by showing that the complexity of mind which Eliot expresses through her imaginative use of scientific language takes on a potentially theological significance His book suggests a new trajectory for scholars exploring George Eliot's representations of the self in the context of science society and religious faith Memories of Maggie (Magnolia) Garrett Fortner Elizabeth J.
