Facilitators of improving the function of nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) in Iran's health system

Mohanna Rajabi^{1,2}, Parvin Ebrahimi², Aidin Aryankhesal²

Abstract:

BACKGROUND: Iranian health nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) could play a variety of roles at many levels of Iran's health system, but their participation in the health sector is far from ideal. Therefore, this study was conducted to identify practical solutions for increasing the role and function of NGOs in the Iranian health system.

MATERIALS AND METHODS: This qualitative study was conducted between 2020 and 2021 in Tehran, Iran. The data for this study were gathered through 32 in-depth semi-structured interviews with 11 managers from the Ministry of Health as well as from Iran and Tehran universities of medical sciences and 21 Chief executive officers and directors of health NGOs. Data were analyzed by the content analysis approach using the MAXQDA 10 software.

RESULTS: The facilitators for expanding the function and roles of NGOs in Iran's health system are classified into two groups of legal and structural mechanisms. "The existence of mandatory laws," "government support for NGOs," "the formulation of standard strategic planning and goals," "the establishment of a database and a network of NGOs," and "the establishment of independent organizational units as the connectors and coordinators of NGOs' affairs in the public sector" are the critical facilitators for the improvement of NGOs' roles in Iran's health system.

CONCLUSION: According to the findings of this study, only limited measures and efforts have been made to improve NGOs' roles and participation in the Iranian health system; at the same time, NGOs' participation in the health sector is far from ideal. Iranian health NGOs are at the beginning of this route, and they would inevitably require various legislative and structural mechanisms to succeed.

Introduction

A healthy human being is the bedrock of sustainable development, and as such, efforts to preserve and enhance health are always a top priority for all governments.^[1] With the advancement of societies and the proliferation of concerns and challenges associated with health systems, governments are no longer able to manage the health demands and expectations of people on their own.^[2-7] As a result, nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) have been acknowledged as a source of health care providers in many countries, particularly low- and middle-income countries.^[8]

As in other countries, to alleviate and resolve people's issues, the Iranian NGOs collaborate with the public sector to provide various social, legal, health, gender, and environmental services and act as a facilitator between the people and government officials to empower social

Managing Nongovernmental Organizations Frederik Claeyé, 2014-03-26

The idea that international development aid needs to be better managed and coordinated gained currency in the early 1990s The increasing emphasis on management has resulted in the present vogue of managing for development results as one of the central tenets in the discourse on international aid But how appropriate are these ideas tools and techniques for non governmental development organizations NGOs and how much does geographic context matter Examining the current debate on aid effectiveness and the role of NGOs in contributing to it this book highlights the critical importance of understanding how the global and the local interact to increase aid efficacy and develop more culturally astute ways of managing NGOs With a focus on NGOs active in sub Saharan Africa as case studies author Frederik Claey demonstrates that NGOs are not mere passive recipients of management knowledge and practices emanating from the global governance structure of international aid but actively engage with these ideas and practices to translate and rework them through a local cultural lens This process results in the emergence of unique hybrid management systems that combine the pressure to become more business like with the mission to satisfy the demands of the communities they serve

Environmental Action in Eastern Europe Barbara Jancar-Webster, 2016-09-16 The environmental crisis in Eastern Europe air and water pollution toxic waste dumps and unsafe nuclear facilities has been vividly documented since the revolution of 1989 Not only did the communist states have an abysmal record of environmental destruction but the issue of environmental protection and safety proved to be one of the most powerful catalysts of unified opposition to these regimes This collection of essays by both Western and East European experts examines the efforts to develop strategies for dealing with the crisis both by governments and at the grassroots level of newly emerging Green movements Among the countries represented here are Poland Hungary Czechoslovakia Lithuania Slovenia and the Commonwealth of Independent States

Sarah E. Mendelson,John K. Glenn,2002-09-11 Since the end of the Cold War a virtual army of nongovernmental organizations NGOs from the United States Britain Germany and elsewhere in Europe have flocked to Central and Eastern Europe and Eurasia These NGOs are working on such diverse tasks as helping to establish competitive political parties elections and independent media as well as trying to reduce ethnic conflict This important book is among the few efforts to assess the impact of these international efforts to build democratic institutions The case studies presented here provide a portrait of the mechanisms by which ideas commonly associated with democratic states have evolved in formerly communist states revealing conditions that help as well as hurt the process Environmental Justice in America Edwardo Lao

Glenn,2002-01-21 This is a time of far reaching change and debate in American education and social policy spurred in part by a rediscovery that civil society institutions are often better than government at meeting human needs As Charles Glenn shows in this book faith based schools and social agencies have been particularly effective especially in meeting the needs of the most vulnerable However many oppose providing public funds for religious institutions either on the grounds that it would threaten the constitutional separation of church and state or from concern it might dilute or secularize the distinctive character of the institutions themselves Glenn tackles these arguments head on He builds a uniquely comprehensive and persuasive case for faith based organizations playing a far more active role in American schools and social agencies And most importantly he shows that they could do so both while receiving public funds and while striking a workable balance between accountability and autonomy Glenn is ideally placed to make this argument A leading expert on international education policies he was for many years the director of urban education and civil rights for the Massachusetts Department of Education and also serves as an Associate Minister of inner city churches in Boston Glenn draws on all his varied experience here as he reviews the policies and practices of governments in the United States and Europe as they have worked with faith based schools and also with such social agencies as the Salvation Army and Teen Challenge He seeks to answer key theoretical and practical questions Why should government make greater use of faith based providers How could they do so without violating First Amendment limits What working relationships protect the goals and standards both of government and of the organizations that the government funds Glenn shows that with appropriate forms of accountability and a strong commitment to a distinctive vision of service faith based organizations can collaborate safely with government to their mutual benefit and that of those they serve This is a major contribution to one of the most important topics in political and social debate today Global Intelligence and Human Development Mihai Spariosu, 2004 Proposes an innovative approach to globalization based on an ethics of global awareness
