Federal Tax Policy and Charitable Giving Charles T. Clotfelter, 2007-12-01 The United States is distinctive among Western countries in its reliance on nonprofit institutions to perform major social functions This reliance is rooted in American history and is fostered by federal tax provisions for charitable giving In this study Charles T Clotfelter demonstrates that changes in tax policy effected through legislation or inflation can have a significant impact on the level and composition of giving Clotfelter focuses on empirical analysis of the effects of tax policy on charitable giving in four major areas individual contributions volunteering corporate giving and charitable bequests For each area discussions of economic theory and relevant tax law precede a review of the data and methodology used in econometric studies of charitable giving In addition new econometric analyses are presented as well as empirical data on the effect of taxes on foundations While taxes are not the most important determinant of contributions the results of the analyses presented here suggest that charitable deductions as well as tax rates and other aspects of the tax system are significant factors in determining the size and distribution of charitable giving This work is a model for policy oriented research efforts but it also supplies a major and very timely addition to the evidence that must inform future proposals for tax reform

Downing,K.I. Hanf,2013-03-09 This book is the culmination of a process that started in the summer of 1979 One of the editors was invited to work with several members of the International Institute for Environment and Society These researchers were in the early stages of a rather ambitious project designed to study differences in the implementation of pollution control laws among European countries Our discussions soon revealed that there was much to be learned by the sharing of our research findings in the United States and Europe Discussions among the researchers at IIES suggested that we expected there to be wide cultural and institutional differences among countries and therefore significant differences in the operation and effectiveness of control efforts in different countries It has been argued al most universally that differences in institutional form will lead to differences in pollution control outcomes By comparing implementation in various countries we could observe the ef fects of institutional differences The IIES project was only one study of the implementation process Perhaps by analyzing the results of various studies by various authors and for a wide variety of countries and situations more could be learned The conference idea was born The idea culminated in two conferences The first confer ence was sponsored by the Policy Sciences Program at Florida State University and was held in Tallahassee Florida March 6 7 1981 The second conference was sponsored by the IIES and was held in Berlin Germany October 1 3 1981 The Reagan Experiment John
