from the polite compliment that doesn't accurately relay one's true feelings to self-deception about one's own motivations. What fuels the need for people to intricately construct lies and illusions about their own lives? If deceptions are unconscious, does it mean that we are not responsible for their consequences? Why does self-deception or the need for illusion make us feel uncomfortable? Taking into account the sheer ubiquity and ordinariness of deception, this interdisciplinary work moves away from the cut-and-dried notion of duplicity as evil and illuminates the ways in which deception can also be understood as an adaptive response to the demands of living with others. The book articulates the boundaries between unethical and adaptive deception, demonstrating how some lies serve socially approved goals while others provoke distrust and condemnation. Throughout the volume, it focuses on the range of emotions from feelings of shame, fear, or envy to those of concern and compassion that motivate our desire to deceive ourselves and others. Providing an interdisciplinary exploration of the widespread phenomenon of lying and deception, this volume promotes a more fully integrated understanding of how people function in their everyday lives. Case illustrations, humor, and wit, concrete examples, and even a mock television sitcom script bring the ideas to life for clinical practitioners, behavioral scientists, and philosophers, and for students in these realms.

Nonverbal Communication Across Disciplines: Culture, sensory interaction, speech, conversation Fernando Poyatos, 2002. In a progressive and systematic approach to communication and always through an interdisciplinary and cross-cultural perspective, this first volume presents culture as an intricate grid of sensible and intelligible sign systems in space and time, identifying the semiotic and interactive problems inherent in intercultural and subcultural communication according to verbal-nonverbal cultural fluency. The author lays out the fascinating complexity of our direct and synesthetic sensory perception of people and artifactual and environmental elements and its audible and visual manifestations through our speaking face, to then acknowledge the triple reality of discourse as verbal language, paralinguistics, kinesics, which is applied through two realistic models: a) for a verbal-nonverbal comprehensive transcription of interactive speech and b) for the implementation of nonverbal communication in foreign language teaching. The author presents his exhaustive model of nonverbal categories for a detailed analysis of normal or pathological behaviors in any interactive or noninteractive manifestation and based on all the previous material, his equally exhaustive structural model for the study of conversational encounters, which suggests many applications in different fields such as the intercultural and multisystem communication situation developed in simultaneous or consecutive interpreting. 956 literary quotations from 103 authors and 194 works illustrate all the points discussed.
