The Doctoral Colloquium at CSCW 96 is a forum in which Ph.D. students can meet and discuss their work with each other and a panel of experienced CSCW researchers and practitioners. Ten participants were accepted from the disciplines which form CSCW, including sociology, computer science, cognitive science, etc. During the colloquium, participants will be expected to give a short, informal presentation of their work, to be followed by a discussion.

Conflict and Cooperation in the Courts: Case Study of How CSCW Alters Work

Cooperative work has been studied by social scientists since the 19th century. Recently, computer scientists have explored cooperative work to understand how to best design computer supported cooperative work (CSCW) systems for effective use in organizations. Less attention has been focused on the study of conflict within cooperative work settings. This qualitative study addresses conflict within cooperative work in the California criminal courts where attorneys and judges work cooperatively to resolve disputes in an adversarial setting. The CSCW applications being studied are computer-aided realtime transcription and legal research digital libraries. Results will contribute to our understanding of the nature of conflict in cooperative work and of the use of production level CSCW embedded in complex work.

Designing domain-oriented systems requires knowledge both in system and in the domain to be supported. Communication between domain experts and system developers is essential to elicit or "activate" this knowledge. Contextualized information, conveyed in ongoing communication and evaluation, sheds light on problems and solutions that may otherwise remain uncovered. This information is valuable beyond the particular situation in which it originates. Experiences of our L3D research group with industries and universities have shown that the tasks of activating and capturing communication about system design, relating it to prior experiences, and feeding new insights back into a group memory face a number of challenges. I am developing an interactive group memory management system called GIMMe for growing diverse group memories during software design to explore the issues surrounding these challenges.

Metonymy as an Organising Principle of IT Communities

Olaf Boettger

This research suggests two ways of examining 'technologies-in-community' assemblages: a local-horizontal approach (similar to anthropology) and a global-vertical approach (theory). Both approaches as well as the movement between them are assembled according to organising principles. My PhD research specifically examines the role of metonymy as an organising principle.

Metonymy has been neglected in research when compared with metaphor but is one of the main mechanisms for human categorisation, i.e. for making sense of complexity and instability. Examining metonymy leads us back to basic cybernetic concerns about the nature of information and its influence in structuring our ways of thinking about information (technology).

These insights can then be used to link the two approaches mentioned above and apply this knowledge to practical issues such as e.g. the development of genres or questions of design.

Rehabilitation and Mental Health Practice documents one of these new fields one formed by the coalescence of rehabilitative and mental health services and employment Only recently have human service practitioners policy makers and administrators recognized that there is a growing synergy among these areas once separated by great gulfs of differences in culture perspectives and values and technologies It is not happenstance that rehabilitation mental health and employment are becoming increasingly integrated in contemporary human services There is considerable interest in work in contemporary society although different values and perspectives mediate this interest For people with disabilities an interest in work often comes from deep frustration from not having ready access to work and from not having enough of it to facilitate an acceptable quality of life or independent living Some people find work to be a source of problems that negatively affects their functioning They find the workplace stressful and unsupportive or they feel that work exacts too much from them reducing their quality of life and setting into motion numerous negative personal effects Beck 2000 High Performance Memory Systems Haldun Hadimioglu, David Kaeli, Jeffrey Kusk, Ashwini Nanda, Josep Torrellas, 2003-10-31 The State of Memory Technology Over the past decade there has been rapid growth in the speed of microprocessors CPU speeds are approximately doubling every eighteen months while main memory speed doubles about every ten years The International Technology Roadmap for Semiconductors ITRS study suggests that memory will remain on its current growth path The ITRS short and long term targets indicate continued scaling improvements at about the current rate by 2016 This translates to bit densities increasing at two times every two years until the introduction of 8 gigabit dynamic random access memory DRAM chips after which densities will increase four times every five years A similar growth pattern is forecast for other high density chip areas and high performance logic e g microprocessors and application specific integrated circuits ASICs In the future molecular devices 64 gigabit DRAMs and 28 GHz clock signals are targeted Although densities continue to grow we still do not see significant advances that will improve memory speed These trends have created a problem that has been labeled the Memory Wall or Memory Gap Proceedings of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, 1912 Digitalization Across Organizational Levels Jens Dibbern, Jens Förderer, Thomas Kude, Franz Rothlauf, Kai Spohrer, 2022-09-27 This book covers a broad range of topics related to digitalization Specifically it views digitalization across different organizational levels such as the level of individuals teams processes firms and ecosystems It includes a collection of recent research and reflections on the topic that helps to understand the technological foundations of digitalization and its impacts It also reflects on the process of digitalization and how it changes established ways of working collaborating and coordinating With this book the editors and authors honor Professor Dr Armin Heinzl for his enormous and ongoing contributions to information systems research education and practice PRO 22: International RILEM Symposium on Joints in Timber Structures Simon Aicher, Hans-Wolf Reinhardt, 2001 Journal of Engineering Education, 2005 Social Work, Domestic Violence and Child Protection
