Religious Assortative Marriage In The United States:

Religious Assortative Marriage Robert Alan Johnson, 2013-10-22 Religious Assortative Marriage in the United States aims to formulate and apply to American religious data macrosociological models of assortative marriage in pluralistic populations. These models postulate that the factors determining assortative marriage are population structure, social divisions, and norms of endogamy. An important application of these models is to counter the ideological assumption implicit in the popular image of a melting pot of nations that the amalgamation of groups in the marriage market is the inevitable outcome of a historical plan of assimilation. The book begins by establishing a demographic framework by embedding assortative marriage in a broader model of the replacement of religious composition. This is followed by separate chapters on specialized theories concerned with the social determinants of assortative marriage, available religious marital selection data in the United States, and regional residential and cohort differentials in assortative marriage. The final chapter discusses how the general marriage market model that is sufficiently flexible to be broadly applicable to diverse structures of religious or other assortative marriage can be mathematically manipulated to generate laws of social statics and dynamics. The Restructuring of American Religion Robert Wuthnow, 2021-02-09 The description for this book The Restructuring of American Religion: Society and Faith since World War II will be forthcoming. Religion, Economics and Demography Evelyn Lehrer, 2008-10-27 Using the tools of economics, this book analyses how religion affects decisions and outcomes in a wide range of areas including education, employment, family size, entry into cohabitation, and formal marriage, the choice of spouse, and divorce. In each case, the relationships are rigorously quantified based on multivariate statistical analyses of large-scale US data. The results show, for example, that when people marry outside their faith, there is an increase in the probability of divorce, the magnitude of the adverse effect depending in part on the ecumenical/exclusivist nature of the two religions. Other analyses show that youth who grow up with some religion in their lives are less likely than their counterparts with little or no religious involvement to drop out of high school or enter cohabiting arrangements at a young age. Overall, both religious affiliation and the extent of participation in religious activities are found to have far-reaching implications for economic and demographic behaviour. The book contains a wealth of data illustrating how the religious and secular realms of people's lives are intimately intertwined. With its economic perspective, it offers new ways of thinking about these relationships and is a valuable resource for students and scholars interested in the role of religion in education, work, and the family. The Population of the United States Donald J. Who Marries Whom? Hans-Peter Blossfeld,A. Timm,2012-12-06 Marriage and social inequality are closely interrelated Marriage is dependent on the structure of marriage markets and marriage patterns have consequences for social inequality This book demonstrates that in most modern societies the educational system has become an increasingly important marriage market particularly for those who are highly qualified Educational expansion in general and the rising educational participation of women in particular unintentionally have increased the rate of assortative meeting and assortative mating across birth cohorts Rising educational homogamy means that social inequality is further enhanced through marriage because better and worse educated single men and women pool their economic and sociocultural advantages and disadvantages within couples In this book we study the changing role of the educational system as a marriage market in modern societies from a cross national comparative perspective Using life history data from a broad range of industrialized countries and longitudinal statistical models we analyze the process of

Work, Family and Religion in Contemporary Society Nancy Tatom Ammerman,Wade Clark Roof,2014-02-04 Until recently religious institutions have been organized to suit the traditional American family where the wife stayed at home caring for children Today churches and synagogues are beginning to adapt to the reality of the American family dual career marriages high levels of divorce interfaith marriages partnerships that may not be marriages Religious organizations must serve families that don't fall into the Ozzie and Harriet mold The first group of papers in this edited volume documents changing trends in the connection between religion work and the family In the second part of the book we see how changing families and flexible congregations are experimenting with new forms of religious life Ethnic Groups and Marital Choices Madeline A. Richard,1991 Comparing ethno religious intermarriage this book provides the background for understanding the dynamics of intermarriage in a culturally pluralistic society such as Canada Islam and Mammon Timur Kuran,2010-12-16 The doctrine of Islamic economics entered debates over the social role of Islam in the mid twentieth century Since then it has pursued the goal of restructuring economies according to perceived Islamic teachings Beyond its most visible practical achievement the establishment of Islamic banks meant to avoid interest it has promoted Islamic norms of economic behavior and founded redistribution systems modeled after early Islamic fiscal practices In this bold and timely critique Timur Kuran argues that the doctrine of Islamic economics is simplistic incoherent and largely irrelevant to present economic challenges Observing that few Muslims take it seriously he also finds that its practical applications have had no discernible effects on efficiency growth or poverty reduction Why then has Islamic economics enjoyed any appeal at all Kuran s answer is that the real purpose of Islamic economics has not been economic improvement but cultivation of a distinct Islamic identity to resist cultural globalization The Islamic subeconomies that have sprung up across the Islamic world are commonly viewed as manifestations of Islamic economics In reality Kuran demonstrates they emerged to meet the economic aspirations of socially marginalized groups The Islamic enterprises that form these subeconomies provide advancement opportunities to the disadvantaged By enhancing interpersonal trust they also facilitate intragroup transactions These findings raise the question of whether there exist links between Islam and economic performance Exploring these links in relation to the long unsettled question of why the Islamic world became underdeveloped Kuran identifies several pertinent social mechanisms some beneficial to economic development others harmful
