Paradise from behind the Iron Curtain provides a detailed survey of the key responses to Milton's work in Hungarian state socialism The four decades between 1948 and 1989 saw a radical revision of previous critical and artistic positions and resulted in the emergence of some characteristically Eastern European responses to Milton's works Critical and artistic appraisals of Milton's works in the communist era proved more controversial than receptions of other major Western authors on the one hand Milton's participation in the Civil War earned him the title of a revolutionary hero on the other hand religious aspects of his works were often disregarded and sometimes proactively suppressed Ranging through all the genres of Milton's oeuvre as well as the critical tradition the book highlights these diverging responses and places them in the wider context of socialist cultural policy In addition the author presents the full Hungarian script of the 1970 theatrical performance of Milton's Paradise Lost the first of its kind since the work's publication including a parallel English translation which enables a deeper reflection on Milton's original theodicy and its possible interpretations in communist Hungary

Confessions of Faith in Early Modern England Brooke Conti,2014-01-18 As seventeenth century England wrestled with the aftereffects of the Reformation the personal frequently conflicted with the political In speeches political pamphlets and other works of religious controversy writers from the reign of James I to that of James II unexpectedly erupt into autobiography John Milton famously interrupts his arguments against episcopacy with autobiographical accounts of his poetic hopes and dreams while John Donne's attempts to describe his conversion from Catholicism wind up obscuring rather than explaining Similar moments appear in the works of Thomas Browne John Bunyan and the two King Jameses themselves These autobiographies are familiar enough that their peculiarities have frequently been overlooked in scholarship but as Brooke Conti notes they sit uneasily within their surrounding material as well as within the conventions of confessional literature that preceded them Confessions of Faith in Early Modern England positions works such as Milton's political tracts Donne's polemical and devotional prose Browne's Religio Medici and Bunyan's Grace Abounding to the Chief of Sinners as products of the era's tense political climate illuminating how the pressures of public self declaration and allegiance led to autobiographical writings that often concealed more than they revealed For these authors autobiography was less a genre than a device to negotiate competing political personal and psychological demands The complex works Conti explores
