Faith-based Schools and the State Harry Judge, 2002-01-01 The questions raised by government support for faith based schools are now proving to be increasingly relevant and contentious In one form or another they have a long history and are embedded in classical disagreements about the proper relationship between State and Church or between secular power and religious freedom They have been given a sharper edge by recent events and by the emphasis laid by some governments on the importance of increasing public support for schools attached to different denominations and religions Is it appropriate in a pluralist society to support some forms of religious expression and not others What are the basic reasons for mingling or indeed refusing to mingle political and religious issues What are the larger social effects of encouraging separate schooling for distinct sectors of society These are among the questions raised and illuminated by this case study historical and comparative in character of the developing relationship between the State and the Catholic communities in three very different societies

The Dissenting Tradition in American Education James C. Carper, Thomas C. Hunt, 2007 During the mid nineteenth century Americans created the functional equivalent of earlier state religious establishments Supported by mandatory taxation purportedly inclusive and vested with messianic promise public schooling like the earlier established churches was touted as a bulwark of the Republic and as an essential agent of moral and civic virtue As was the case with dissenters from early American established churches some citizens and religious minorities have dissented from the public school system what historian Sidney Mead calls the country's established church They have objected to the orthodoxy of the public school compulsory taxation and attempts to abolish their schools or bring them into conformity with the state school paradigm The Dissenting Tradition in American Education recounts episodes of Catholic and Protestant nonconformity since the inception of public education including the creation of Catholic and Protestant schools homeschooling conflicts regarding regulation of nonconforming schools and controversy about the propositions of knowledge and dispositions of belief and value sanctioned by the state school Such dissent suggests that Americans consider disestablishing the public school and ponder means of education more suited to their confessional pluralism and commitments to freedom of conscience parental liberty and educational justice The United States Catalog ,1925 The Contemporary Catholic School Terence McLaughlin, Joseph O'Keefe, 2003-10-04 First published in 2004 Routledge is an imprint of Taylor Francis an informa
