and context This is predicated on the assumption that society is characterized by a complex reality where youth ranging between 15 and 28 years old face multiple social challenges such as the need to succeed in a highly competitive environment cope with stress deal with a global pandemic and subsequently flourish now and in the future as adults Further many youth are currently incarcerated serving sentences and need support to become active contributors to society in the future For example in the United States of America approximately more than 30 000 youth are currently incarcerated Considering that many young people are incarcerated across the globe there is the need to have in mind the long term detriments associated with incarceration during adolescence such as mental health disorders and the low reintegration rate In many cases young people experience problems with reintegration into society after their release from prison Self subversion is a conscious effort to understand our minds We can make a determined effort to know the way we think This can be done by drawing inferences from past experience We can know why we have a fear for a particular activity or object by delving deep into the way we reacted to that fear or object This will give us a better insight into our inner minds Once we understand the basic cause of the fear we can take steps to overcome it Do you remember your first day at school Were you afraid to leave your mom and dad to go to a new place After a while you enjoyed going to school How was this possible By analyzing and understanding the way you overcame this fear can help you to conquer any other fear that you have Our behavior is highly influenced by external forces These forces could include the various events that happen around us like violence racism poverty crime abuse and much more They are mostly negative than positive Like our past experience we can also draw inference from these events We can analyze our reaction to a particular event and then analyze the cause effect relationship By determining the cause and by understanding the effect we can make a premeditated decision to overcome any negative effect of that event Understanding our fear and taking steps to overcome them will go a long way in making us self reliant Our dependence on external factors and our fear or reluctance to do a certain activity will be greatly reduced This will give us the self confidence to achieve whatever we want The author a criminal lawyer tries through this book to provide practical solutions to the problems that prisoners may face once they are released from prison in order to coexist in society without psychological problems He also tries in this book to develop the social self of society in general and the book is a summary of accurate scientific research in the field of criminal psychology Buy this eBook Now
