Accountability and Oversight of US Exchange Rate Policy C. Randall Henning, 2008-06-01 The dispute over Chinese exchange rate policy within the United States has generated a series of legislative proposals to restrict the discretion of the US Treasury Department in determining currency manipulation and to reform the department's accountability to the Congress This study reviews the Treasury's reports to the Congress on exchange rate policy introduced by the 1988 trade act and Congress's treatment of them It finds that the accountability process has often not worked well in practice The coverage of the reports has sometimes been incomplete and not provided a sufficient basis for congressional oversight Nor has Congress always performed its own role well holding hearings on less than half of the reports and overlooking important substantive issues Several recommendations can improve guidance to the Treasury standards for assessment and congressional oversight These include 1 refining the criteria used to determine currency manipulation and writing them into law 2 explicitly harnessing US decisions on manipulation to the IMF's rules on exchange rates 3 clarifying the general objectives of US exchange rate policy 4 reaffirming the mandate to seek international macroeconomic and currency cooperation and 5 institutionalizing multicommittee oversight of exchange rate policy by Congress As they develop legislation targeting manipulation furthermore legislators should not lose sight of the broader purposes of the 1988 act relating to the effective valuation of the dollar the current account and their ramifications for the US economy overall Developing Nations and the Politics of Global Integration Stephan Haggard, 1995-04-01 Developing countries are becoming important players in the world economy Although they were slow to liberalize trade they are now joining the more economically advanced nations in implementing trade reforms and in taking steps to deepen global integration The lowering of trade barriers and the growth of foreign investment have benefited the developing countries but have also created vulnerabilities including risks of dependence and political interference Is deeper integration in the best interest of developing countries In this book part of the Integrating National Economies series Stephen Haggard examines the position of the developing countries in the international trade regime Focusing on the nations of East and Southeast Asia and Latin American Haggard explores the cause of economic liberalization policies in the developing nations He argues that various international constraints such as economic shocks and political pressures from the economically advanced nations pushed developing countries to open up to international competition and to pursue economic relations with advanced industrial states Haggard addresses such central questions as Will developing countries benefit from the deep integration agenda Will they instead join closed regional blocs that fragment the international economy Will the developing nations orient themselves toward the multilateral institutions particularly the World Trade Organization or will they gravitate toward regional arrangements Haggard argues that the advanced developing countries have become strong supporters of the multilateral system and that the extent of regionalism has been over stated He contends that a more serious threat is the lure of bilateralism and the effort of the advanced industrial states to impose standards on developing countries that are inappropriate or politically counterproductive A volume of Brookings Integrating National Economies Series Empirical Methods in International Trade Mordechai Elihu Kreinin, Michael G. Plummer, 2004-01-01 Internationalization of the world economy has made trade a key factor in the growth potential of nearly every economy Hence economists have become increasingly interested in the determinants of international trade and competitiveness Empirical Models i Partisan Investment in the Global Economy Pablo M. Pinto, 2013-03-29 Pinto develops a partisan theory of foreign direct investment FDI arguing that left wing governments choose policies that allow easier entry by foreign investors more than right wing governments and that foreign investors prefer to invest in countries governed by the left To reach this determination the book derives the conditions under which investment flows should be expected to affect the relative demand for the services supplied by economic actors in host countries Based on these expected distributive consequences a political economy model of the regulation of FDI and changes in investment performance within countries and over time is developed The theory is tested using both cross national statistical analysis and two case studies exploring the development of the foreign investment regimes and their performance over the past century in Argentina and South Korea Avoiding the Apocalypse: The Future of the Two Koreas [ISBN not on www] Noland, Marcus, 2000 Governing Financial Globalization Andrew Baker, David Hudson, Richard Woodward, 2005-02-01 Money finance and credit are literally the lifeblood of the modern economy The distribution of money and credit are essential to productive investment in trade and industry to the maintenance of consumer purchasing power and demand to individuals social status and standard of living and ultimately to public order This important new volume provides a wide ranging discussion of both the potential and the problems arising from the application of multi level governance literature to the monetary and financial domain The contributors achieve this through a range of case studies and conceptual discussions of the issues raised by financial and monetary governance acknowledging that multi level governance has to take the form of a framework which recognizes a fluid range of scales and the significance of non formal institutional and social nodes of authority The Journal of American-East Asian Relations , 2001 United States Foreign Policy United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on Foreign Relations, 1961
