(both previously unavailable)

A surreal painting featuring a person's back and head in the center, rendered in a light, almost ethereal tone. The person is facing away from the viewer, looking out into a dark, vast space. Surrounding the person are several planets and moons of various sizes and colors, including orange, white, and grey. The background is a deep black, with a hint of a colorful, curved horizon at the top. The overall mood is contemplative and cosmic.

Ends and Means: An Inquiry into the Nature of Ideals Aldous Huxley, 2025-09-16T00:00:00Z Contemporary intellectuals still struggle over the relationship of ends to means especially in political discourse Pacifism is still an important topic today as terrorism and dictatorial states abound Many will find solace in Ends and Means while others will find the book only a case study of the relationship of ethics to politics Aldous Huxley examines common issues in a unique fashion How can the regression in charity through which we are living and for which each one of us is in some measure responsible be halted and reversed How can existing society be transformed into the ideal society described by the prophets How can the average sensual man and the exceptional and more dangerous ambitious man be transformed into a non attached being one who can create a society significantly better than our own Huxley discusses the relationship between the theories and the practices of reformers and the nature of the universe He argues that our beliefs about the ultimate nature of reality help us formulate conceptions of right and wrong not only in our private life but also in the sphere of politics and economics Far from being irrelevant our philosophical beliefs are the final determining factor in our actions perspective of early narratology Science Learning and Instruction Marcia C. Linn, Bat-Sheva Eylon, 2011-05-20

Science Learning and Instruction describes advances in understanding the nature of science learning and their implications for the design of science instruction. The authors show how design patterns, design principles, and professional development opportunities coalesce to create and sustain effective instruction in each primary scientific domain: earth science, life science, and physical science. Calling for more in-depth and less fleeting coverage of science topics in order to accomplish knowledge integration, the book highlights the importance of designing the instructional materials, the examples that are introduced in each scientific domain, and the professional development that accompanies these materials. It argues that unless all these efforts are made simultaneously, educators cannot hope to improve science learning outcomes. The book also addresses how many policies, including curriculum standards, guidelines, and standardized tests, work against the goal of integrative understanding and discusses opportunities to rethink science education policies based on research findings from instruction that emphasizes such understanding.
