Satyajit Ray's The Chess Players and Postcolonial Film Theory Reena Dube, 2005-05-04 Indispensable for students of film studies in this book Reena Dube explores Satyajit Ray's films and The Chess Players in particular in the context of discourses of labour in colonial and postcolonial conditions Starting from Daniel Defoe and moving through history short story and film to the present Dube widens her analysis with comparisons in which Indian films are situated alongside Hollywood and other films and interweaves historical and cultural debates within film theory Her book treats film as part of the larger cultural production of India and provides a historical sense of the cross genre borrowings traditions and debates that have deeply influenced Indian cinema and its viewers Bringing History to Life through Film Kathryn Anne Morey, 2013-12-12

Whether re-creating an actual event or simply being set in a bygone era films have long taken liberties with the truth While some members of the audience can appreciate a movie without being distracted by historical inaccuracies other viewers are more discerning From revered classics like Gone with the Wind to recent award winners like Argo Hollywood films often are taken to task for their loose adherence to the facts But what obligation do filmmakers have to the truth when trying to create a two hour piece of entertainment In Bringing History to Life through Film The Art of Cinematic Storytelling Kathryn Anne Morey brings together essays that explore the controversial issue of film as a purveyor of history Examining a range of films including highly regarded features like The Last of the Mohicans and Pan's Labyrinth as well as blockbuster franchises like Pirates of the Caribbean chapters demonstrate that the debate surrounding the role of history on film is still as raw as ever Organized in five sections these essays discuss the myths and realities of history as they are portrayed on film from Nostalgic Utopias to Myths and Fairy Tales The fourteen chapters shed light on how films both convey and distort historical realities to capture the essence of the past rather than the past itself Ultimately they consider what role cinema plays as the quintessential historical storyteller In addition to cinema and media studies this book will appeal to scholars of history and fans of a wide range of cinematic genres The 20th Century O-Z Frank N. Third World Film Making and the West Roy

Armes,1987-07-29 This volume is the first fully comprehensive account of film production in the Third World Although they are usually ignored or marginalized in histories of world cinema Third World countries now produce well over half of the world s films Roy Armes sets out initially to place this huge output in a wider context examining the forces of tradition and colonialism that have shaped the Third World defined as those countries that have emerged from Western control but have not fully developed their economic potential or rejected the capitalist system in favor of some socialist alternative He then considers the paradoxes of social structure and cultural life in the post independence world where even such basic concepts as nation national culture and language are problematic The first experience of cinema for such countries has invariably been that of imported Western films which created the audience and in most cases still dominate the market today Thus Third World film makers have had to assert their identity against formidable outside pressures The later sections of the book look at their output from a number of angles in terms of the stages of overall growth and corresponding stages of cinematic development from the point of view of regional evolution in Asia Africa and Latin America and through a detailed examination of the work of some of the Third World's most striking film innovators. In addition to charting the broad outlines of filmic developments too little known in Europe and the United States, the book calls into question many of the assumptions that shape conventional film history. It stresses the role of distribution in defining and limiting production, queries simplistic notions of independent national cinemas, and points to the need to take social and economic factors into account when considering authorship in cinema. Above all, the book celebrates the achievements of a mass of largely unknown film makers who in difficult circumstances have distinctively expanded our definitions of the art of cinema. Roy Armes, who lives in London, has written nine books on film, his most recent being French Cinema. He spent more than three years researching this volume.

This work traces a career with its beginnings in political cinema and a realist aesthetic. Bengali Cinema

Sharmistha Gooptu, 2010-11 Covering the years spanning cinema's emergence as a popular form in Bengal in the first half of the twentieth century this book examines the main genres and trends produced by this cinema and leads up to Bengali cinema's last phase of transition in the 1980s Arguing that Bengali cinema has been a key economic and social institution the author highlights that the Bengali filmic imaginary existed over and above the imaginary of the Indian nation This book argues that a definitive history of Bengali cinema presents an alternative understanding to the currently influential notion of the Hindi film as the Indian or national cinema It suggests that the Bengali cinema presents a history which brings to the fore the deeply contested terrain of national cinema and shows the creation of the alternative imaginary of the Bengali film The author indicates that the case of the Bengali cinema demonstrates the emergence of a public domain that set up a definitive discourse of difference with respect to the all India Hindi film popularly classified as Bollywood cinema and which pre-empted its subsumption within the more pervasive culture of the Bombay Hindi cinema As the first comprehensive historical work on Bengali cinema this book makes a significant contribution to both Film and Cultural Studies and South Asian Studies in general
