Origin of the Earth and Moon Robin M. Canup, Kevin Righter, 2000-11-01 The age old question of how our home planet and its satellite originated has in recent times undergone a minor revolution The emergence of the giant impact theory as the most successful model for the origin of the Moon has been difficult to reconcile with some aspects of the Earth and the development of an integrated model for the origin of the Earth Moon system has been difficult for this reason However recent technical advances in experimental and isotopic work together with intensified interest in the modeling of planetary dynamics have produced a wealth of new results requiring a rethinking of models for the origin of the Earth and Moon This book is intended to serve as a resource for those scientists working closely in this field while at the same time it provides enough balance and depth to offer an introduction for students or technically minded general readers Its thirty chapters address isotopic and chemical constraints on accretion the dynamics of terrestrial planet formation the impact triggered formation of the Earth Moon system differentiation of the Earth and Moon the origin of terrestrial volatiles and conditions on the young Earth and Moon Covering such subjects as the history and origin of the Moon s orbit water on the Earth and the implications of Earth Moon interactions for terrestrial climate and life the book constitutes a state of the art overview of the most recent investigations in the field Although many advances have been made in our ability to evaluate competing models of the formation of the Earth Moon system there are still many gaps in our understanding This book makes great strides toward closing those gaps by highlighting the extensive progress that has been made and pointing toward future research

Development of an illumination simulation software for the Moon's surface René Schwarz,2016-12-27 The German Aerospace Center DLR is developing a new holistic optical navigation system for all stages of spacecraft planetary approach and landing procedures The central feature of this new navigation system is its landmark based navigation Commonly craters are used as landmarks as they exhibit very characteristic shapes and they are stable over the long term with respect to shape structure and positioning However the flawless perception of these surface features by computers is a non trivial task A possibility of generating realistic surface images of celestial bodies with a significant number of craters and with well known local illumination conditions is essential for the development of new navigation algorithms as well as a technique for estimating the local illumination direction on these images To date no software exists to generate artificial renderings of realistically illuminated planetary surfaces while determining the local solar illumination direction Having said this a surface illumination simulation software for solid planetary surfaces with a significant number of craters has been developed within a master's thesis at the Merseburg University of Applied Sciences and the German Aerospace Center DLR whereas all work has been done in the context of the Moon This software the Moon Surface Illumination Simulation Framework MSISF is the first software known to produce realistic renderings of the entire Moon's surface from virtually every viewpoint while simultaneously generating machine readable information regarding the exactly known parameters for the environmental conditions such as the local solar illumination angle for every pixel of a rendering showing a point on the Moon's surface To produce its renderings the MSISF maintains a global digital elevation model of the Moon using the latest data sets from the ongoing NASA Lunar Reconnaissance Orbiter mission The MSISF has also demonstrated its ability to not only produce single renderings but also whole series of renderings corresponding to a virtual flight trajectory or landing on the Moon The MSISF can also be modified for the rendering of other celestial bodies This book shows how these renderings will be produced and how they will be suitable for the development and testing of new optical navigation algorithms it is based upon the examination version of the original master's thesis
