Challenges for the Democratisation Process in Tanzania Jonas Ewald, 2013 Tanzania has been independent in 2011 for 50 years While most neighbouring states have gone through violent conflicts Tanzania has managed to implement extensive reforms without armed political conflicts Hence Tanzania is an interesting case for Peace and Development research This dissertation analyses the political development in Tanzania since the introduction of the multiparty system in 1992 with a focus on the challenges for the democratisation process in connection with the 2000 and 2005 elections The question of to what extent Tanzania had moved towards a consolidation of democracy is analysed by looking at nine different institutions of importance for democratisation grouped in four spheres the state the political civil and economic society Focus is on the development of the political society and the role of the opposition in particular The analysis is based on secondary and primary material collected between September 2000 to April 2010 The main conclusion is that even if the institutions of liberal democracy have gradually developed in practice single party rule has continued manifested in the 2005 election when the CCM won 92% of seats Despite impressive economic growth poverty remains deep and has not been substantially reduced On a theoretical level this brings the old debate between liberal and substantive democracy back to the fore Neither the economic nor the political reforms have brought about a transformation of the political and economic system resulting in the poor majority gaining substantially more political influence and improved economic conditions Hence it is argued that the interface between the economic political and administrative reforms has not been sufficiently considered in the liberal democratic tradition Liberal democracy is necessary for a democratic development but not sufficient for democracy to be consolidated For that a substantive democratic development is necessary Inter-Municipal Cooperation in Europe Rudie Hulst, André van Montfort, 2007-05-11 Over the past fifty years local government in Europe has been confronted with escalating scales of production population migration and market pressures These developments have complicated its performance challenged its domain and even threatened its existence A popular coping strategy is inter municipal cooperation a phenomenon that despite its ubiquity has not been subject to systematic comparative research This book presents an overview of inter municipal cooperation in eight European countries Each country study sketches its attendant forms their institutional design the tasks and competencies attributed to joint authorities of municipalities and the way inter municipal cooperation operates in practice Both performance and democratic aspects of cooperation are recurring topics The last chapter of the book presents a comparative analysis and reflects on the future of inter municipal cooperation

Prowle,2022-08-12 This book takes an in depth look at the enormous challenges facing UK public services and considers what might be done to resolve them The authors are confident that more of the same over centralised approaches to public policy and so called levelling up policies will just not work Instead they argue for an application of radical measures involving the creation of elected regional governments in England similar to the devolved arrangements in Wales Scotland and Northern Ireland The book comprises four distinct parts introduction and context the need for major reform policies for individual public services and cross cutting themes Following an introduction and discussion of the meaning of the terms public policy and public services the first part goes on to discuss at length the substantial challenges to public policy and public services The second part sets out the need for over arching reforms designed to address the issues discussed above namely the development of elected regional governments Each chapter in part three explores key themes concerning individual public policy areas and public services while part four discusses a number of themes which cut across all the public services already considered Although the book is focused on and is of great relevance within the UK it also has international appeal as many of the themes discussed will have resonance in other countries and the analysis of public policy in regional administrations will also be of interest in other jurisdictions It will appeal to students and academics in the fields of government and politics economics finance and accounting public administration public service management and social policy as well as policymakers practicing civil servants public service managers and elected representatives

AVENUE21. Connected and Automated Driving: Prospects for Urban Europe Mathias Mitteregger, Emilia M. Bruck, Aggelos Soteropoulos, Andrea Stickler, Martin Berger, Jens S. Dangschat, Rudolf Scheuven, Ian Banerjee, 2021-10-07 This open access publication examines the impact of connected and automated vehicles on the European city and the conditions that can enable this technology to make a positive contribution to urban development The authors argue for two theses that have thus far received little attention in scientific discourse as connected and automated vehicles will not be ready for use in all parts of the city for a long time previously assumed effects from traffic safety to traffic performance as well as spatial effects will need to be re evaluated To ensure this technology has a positive impact on the mobility of the future transport and settlement policy regulations must be adapted and further developed Established territorial institutional and organizational boundaries must be investigated and challenged quickly Despite or indeed because of the many uncertainties we find ourselves at the beginning of a new design phase not only in terms of technology development but also regarding politics urban planning administration and civil society
