twenty first century Asia-Pacific Security Cooperation See Seng Tan, Amitav Acharya, 2004 Contributors explore why some forms of security cooperation and institutionalization in the Asia Pacific are more feasible than others bilateral security cooperation and emerging multilateral structures and factors needed to develop complementary relationships between states Patterns of change and continuity are identified and analyzed Soviet Foreign Policy and Southeast Asia (Routledge Revivals) Leszek Buszynski, 2013-09-13 This book focuses on the activity of the Soviet Union in Southeast Asia and the effects of Soviet policy on the region from 1969 to the time of first publication in 1986 In particular Leszek Buszynski examines the rivalry between the Soviet Union and China Soviet presence in Vietnam and the responsive efforts of surrounding regions towards collective security U S policy in the region is a key consideration particularly in terms of American attempts to placate China and encourage Japan to assist in the defence of the region With a concluding assessment of regional trends and possible outcomes this is an important and valuable work for students and scholars with an interest in the history and politics of international diplomacy in Southeast Asia Carbon Democracy Timothy Mitchell, 2013-06-25 A brilliant revisionist argument that places oil companies at the heart of 20th century history and of the political and environmental crises we now face Guardian A sweeping overview of the relationship between fossil fuels and political institutions from the industrial revolution to the Arab Spring Financial Times Oil is a curse it is often said that condemns the countries producing it to an existence defined by war corruption and enormous inequality Carbon Democracy tells a more complex story arguing that no nation escapes the political consequences of our collective dependence on oil It shapes the body politic both in regions such as the Middle East which rely upon revenues from oil production and in the places that have the greatest demand for energy Timothy Mitchell begins with the history of coal power to tell a radical new story about the rise of democracy Coal was a source of energy so open to disruption that oligarchies in the West became vulnerable for the first time to mass demands for democracy In the mid twentieth century however the development of cheap and abundant energy from oil most notably from the Middle East offered a means to reduce this vulnerability to democratic pressures The abundance of oil made it possible for the first time in history to reorganize political life around the management of something now called the economy and the promise of its infinite growth The politics of the West became dependent on an undemocratic Middle East In the twenty first century the oil based forms of modern democratic politics have become unsustainable Foreign intervention and military rule are faltering in the Middle East while governments everywhere appear incapable of addressing the crises that threaten to end the age of carbon democracy the disappearance of cheap energy and the carbon fuelled collapse of the ecological order In making the production of energy the central force shaping the democratic age Carbon Democracy rethinks the history of energy the politics of nature the theory of democracy and the place of the Middle East in our common world Regional Organization and Order in South-East Asia Arnfinn Jorgensen-Dahl, 2016-01-06 Currency and Contest in East Asia William M. Grimes, 2011-03-15 Since the Asian

Financial Crisis of 1997-98 East Asian economies have sought to make themselves less vulnerable to global financial markets by transforming the regional financial architecture. With Japan as a leading actor, they have introduced initiatives to provide emergency financing to crisis economies, support the development of local currency bond markets, and better coordinate currency policies. In Currency and Contest in East Asia, William W. Grimes builds on years of primary research and scores of interviews with participants and policy analysts to provide the most accurate, complete, and detailed description available of attempts to build financial cooperation among East Asian countries. Adapting realist political economy theory to the realities of contemporary global finance, Grimes places regional issues firmly in the wider context of great power rivalries. He argues that financial regionalism can best be understood as one arena for competition among Japan, the United States, and China. Despite their mutual desire for regional prosperity and economic stability, these three powers have conflicting political interests. Their struggles for regional leadership raise questions about the long-term feasibility of regional financial cooperation, the possible effects of Sino-Japanese rivalry on regional financial stability, and the potential for East Asian financial regionalism to undermine the long-established, albeit waning, global and regional dominance of the United States and the dollar.

New Directions for University Museums Brad King, 2023-12-06 New Directions for University Museums is intended to help university museum leaders to help them plan strategically in the context of the issues and needs of the 2020s by examining trends affecting them and directions in response to those forces. It will lay out a series of potential directions for university museums in the 21st century using examples from the field. Although university museums are similar to other museums in their topic areas—art, natural history, archaeology, etc.—they are a unique category that requires special consideration. Today, university museums are grappling with new forces that are affecting their future. University museums still have a dual responsibility to campus and community, and they still try to mount exhibitions that are attractive to the communities in which they are embedded. But they are rethinking the nature of service to town and gown in response to larger trends around accessibility. It is no longer enough to try to attract visitors; these museums are becoming much more active and outgoing in their outreach to the broader public. They have unparalleled access to academic firepower, but university museum research is no longer the sole province of academics intended for publication in scholarly journals. In the 2020s, research is being made much more relevant to existential problems of the world. For example, some are bridging the gap between academic research and teaching and the most pressing social issues of our time, such as climate change, the fight against racism, and the interface between humans and technology. University museum research is no longer cloistered, and these institutions are finding ways to better leverage the new knowledge yielded by collections-based research for both the university and for public benefit. Student engagement and education is still important, but communication is no longer unidirectional from faculty and museum staff to students. Now, student input and co-curation is now invited, as learning becomes a two-way street. Moreover, public science communication has become a much more important role for university museums These are in effect the new directions to which the title refers The main thesis of the book is therefore that university museums are becoming much more outward facing They are engaging with the public and with the world at large as never before In effect they matter more than ever This is the overarching new direction Within this general approach there are a number of questions that the book addresses What are the expectations of university museums in the 21st century from their key stakeholders university administrations faculties and students and the communities in which they are embedded How are those expectations changing and how are the museums evolving to meet them How are university museums navigating the minefields of political polarization cancel culture or heightened activism on campus and in society at large What is the nature of the relationship between the university's research and teaching mission and the university museum What trends can we identify and how can we help the university museum director navigate those trends The university donor relationship what can we learn from a study of donor expectations and the dynamics of university donor relationships in contemporary society How is the relationship between the university museum and the broader external community changing How is the university museum contributing to or detracting from the overall relationship between the university and the community What role is the university museum playing in terms of public communication of research especially public science communication This book is for all those who work in benefit from or are interested in university museums In particular it is hoped that the book will help university museum leaders who are embarking on strategic plans understand the common issues that are currently affecting their peers and provide some context and guidance to those leaders as they chart their own paths for the future and to advance larger goals For faculty it will show how the museum can help improve undergraduate teaching and graduate student training via highlights and illustrations of new ways in which faculty departments are cooperating and partnering with their campus museums and from a university administration point of view how the museum can help the university achieve its bigger strategic goals such as helping increase the percentage of successful faculty grant applications
