Van Brabant,2012-12-06

This volume in essence continues my recent contributions towards building up a better understanding of the wide range of obstacles besetting the transitions away from administrative planning in the former communist regimes in the eastern part of Europe. It is self-contained however. As such it specifically addresses issues revolving around how best to govern economies and indeed societies more generally that are undergoing fundamental structural transformation and whether industrial policy can facilitate progressing with the vexing transformations that will have to be enacted over a protracted period of time. Because of the bewildering variety of hindrances that the managers of the transition have been confronted with many of which were not even contemplated when the programs were first designed regaining a measure of good governance including notably good economic governance is critical in formulating a positive political economy of transition. Arguably most critical is steering the processes of destruction and creation not creative destruction in the Schumpeterian sense. In some cases this requires reallocating decommissioned resources both capital and labor to new activities. Changing rules on the utilization of existing assets is evidently at the core of what the transition towards market-based economic systems should be all about. Very often however this requires establishing new economic activities from domestic and foreign savings.

East Europe, 1963      The East European Economies in the 1970s Alec Nove, Hans-Hermann Höhmann, Gertraud Seidenstecher, 2013-10-22. The East European Economies in the 1970s reviews the development of economic policy in Eastern Europe in the 1970s. This book includes individual country studies that compare and contrast both the aims of economic development and the results of the growth process as well as the instruments employed in economic policy. More specifically, this book examines what has happened during the past decade after the fundamental changes in economic policy that occurred in the 1960s. This text is comprised of 10 chapters, the first of which provides a background on economic reform in Eastern Europe during the 1970s. Attention then turns to the economic policy methods and performance of the USSR after 1970. The chapters that follow focus on the German Democratic Republic, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Bulgaria, Romania, and Yugoslavia. This book concludes with a discussion on the economic system of Albania in the 1970s, focusing on the country's conservative radicalism, agriculture, and sharp disputes on economic policy between 1974 and 1976. Throughout the book, the emphasis is on how the process of reconstruction within the system has led to increasing differentiation of aims, institutions, and instruments of economic policy between individual countries. This book will be of interest to political science students, political scientists, political economists, and policy analysts.

Balkan Economic History, 1550-1950 John R. Lampe, Marvin R. Jackson, 1982-06-22 Western economic historians have traditionally concentrated on the success stories of major developed economies while development economists have given most of their attention to the problems of the Third World The authors of this pioneering work study a part of Europe neglected by both approaches Modernizing patterns in Balkan economic history are traced from the sixteenth century when the territory was shared by Ottoman and Habsburg empires through the nineteenth century when they emerged as independent states to the end of World War II and its aftermath Despite present differences in economic systems Greece's private market economy Yugoslavia's planned market economy and the centrally planned economies of Romania Bulgaria and Albania the authors find that shared origins and common subsequent experiences are ample justifications for treating the area as an economic unit Balkan Economic History 1550 1950 will be a major case study for development economists and will provide historians with the first analytical and statistical study to survey the entire region from the start of the early modern period
