

Museums and Religious Institutions

Preserving sacred objects of utmost importance for both museums and religious institutions

By collaborating and sharing knowledge, museums and religious institutions can enhance each other's efforts in preserving and displaying artifacts

Museums, as guardians of cultural heritage, often prioritize the preservation and conservation of artifacts

Religious institutions, on the other hand, focus on the spiritual and religious aspects of the artifacts

When it comes to displaying artifacts, museums typically adopt a contextual approach

Religious institutions, on the other hand, often display artifacts in the context of worship

In terms of the best option for preserving and displaying artifacts, a combination of museum and religious institution approaches would be ideal

An excellent example of this combination is the British Museum's Egyptian galleries, where ancient Egyptian artifacts, including religious objects, are both preserved and displayed

Greedy Business Leonard Amattey, 2015-12-04 The book GREEDY BUSINESS is a satire directed at human behaviour particularly in regards to human priorities to choose between acts of humanitarianism and greed The author notes that politics indeed is part and parcel of life but no where is it so vividly portrayed than in education and at the work place to satisfy human obsession with greed Then he admitted I cannot deny my role in that but that cannot justify it As individuals we allow Greed to Triumph Morality without humanitarian consideration for others in our efforts to improve quality of our life and that is inexcusable This book is therefore about that aspect of human thinking that can justify individuals doing things to others that they would not like others to do them I wonder how many of us find the necessity to take a step backward to explore the choices we have made to do the things we have done to others that we would not like to be done to us because if done to us they would likely destroy our quality of life Yet some how some of us can justify some of the things we do to others as the result of the choices we have made without humanitarian consideration for them in the name of improving quality of our lives at the expense of our victims Well I did take a step backward and my observations suggest that humans obsession with Greed confirms why we do the things to others that we would not like to be done to us Our tendency to want more and more at the expense of others without humanitarian consideration for the quality of life of others has blinded our moral responsibility to be fair The purpose of writing this book is therefore to share my observations and thoughts with others in the hope that they too may find the need to take a step backward and explore the choices made in the past to do certain things to others that they would not like others to do to them

Seeing the Light Samuel Schuman, 2010-01-18 Samuel Schuman examines the place of religious colleges and universities particularly evangelical Protestant institutions in contemporary American higher education Many faith based schools are flourishing They have rigorous academic standards impressive student recruitment ambitious philanthropic goals and well maintained campuses and facilities Yet much of the U S higher education community ignores them or accords them little respect Seeing the Light considers instead what can be learned from the viability of these institutions The book begins with a history of post secondary U S education from the perspective of the religious traditions from which it arose After focusing briefly on nonevangelical institutions Schuman next looks at three Roman Catholic institutions the College of New Rochelle Villanova University and Thomas Aquinas College He then profiles evangelical colleges and universities in detail discovering the factors contributing to their success These institutions range from nationally recognized to little known from rich to poor with both highly selective and open admission requirements Interviews with key administrators faculty and students reveal the challenges the successes and the goals of these institutions Schuman concludes that these schools Baylor University Anderson University New Saint Andrews College Calvin College North Park University George Fox University Westmont College Oral Roberts University Northwestern College and Wheaton College and others like them offer important and timely lessons for the broader higher education community

The Global Repositioning of Japanese Religions Ugo Dessi, 2016-07-01 The Global Repositioning of Japanese Religions An Integrated Approach explores how Japanese religions respond to the relativizing effects of globalization thereby repositioning themselves as global players Organized around concrete case studies focusing on the engagement of Japanese Buddhism Shinto and several new religious movements in areas such as ecology inter religious dialogue and politics this book shows that the globalization of Japanese religions cannot be explained simply in terms of worldwide institutional expansion Rather it is a complex phenomenon conditioned by a set of pervasive factors changes in consciousness the perception of affinities and resonances at the systemic and cultural levels processes of decontextualization and a wide range of power issues including the re enactment of cultural chauvinism The author investigates these dynamics systematically with attention to broader theoretical questions cross cultural similarities the definition of religion and the perils of ethnocentrism in order to develop his Global Repositioning model which constitutes an integrated approach to the study of Japanese religions under globalization An empirically grounded and theoretically informed study of the effects of global trends on local religions this book will appeal to scholars and students with interests in globalization religious studies Japanese studies Hawaii sociology anthropology and ecology
