Friend ,1912      The Publishers Weekly ,2004      American Book Publishing Record ,2003      Never a Hero Richard Desoto, 2010      Forthcoming Books Rose Arny, 2004      What the World Might Look Like Susie O'Brien, 2024-05-14 The idea of resilience is everywhere these days offering a framework for thriving in volatile times Dominant resilience stories share an attachment to a mythologized past thought to hold clues for navigating a future that is understood to be full of danger These stories also uphold values of settler colonialism and white supremacy What the World Might Look Like examines the way resilience thinking has come to dominate the settler colonial imagination and explores alternative approaches to resilience writing that instead offer decolonial models of thought The book traces settler colonial resilience stories to the rise of resilience science in the 1970s and 1980s illustrating how the discipline supports the projects of white supremacy and colonialism Working to unravel the blanket of common sense that shrouds the idea of resilience the book is equally cautious of settler colonial antiresilience stories that invoke the idea of death as an antidote to unbearable life Susie O'Brien argues that although the dominant narratives of resilience are problematic resilience itself is neither inherently good nor inherently bad Appreciating the significance of resilience stories requires asking what worlds and what communities they are meant to preserve Looking at the fiction of Alexis Wright David Chariandy and Leanne Betasamosake Simpson O'Brien points to the potential of Black and Indigenous thinking around resilience to figure decolonial possibilities for planetary flourishing Exposing the complexities and limits of resilience What the World Might Look Like questions the concept of resilience highlighting how Black and Indigenous novelists can offer different decolonial ways of thinking about and with resilience to imagine things otherwise explores how young people learn to understand and influence the workings of power and justice in their society Since 2008 hundreds of secondary schools across Kenya have been targeted with fire by their students Through an in depth study of Kenyan secondary students use of arson Elizabeth Cooper asks why With insightful ethnographic analysis she shows that these young students deploy arson as moral punishment for perceived injustices and arson proves an effective tactic in their politics from below Drawing from years of research and a rich array of sources Cooper accounts for how school fires stoke a national conversation about the limited means for ordinary Kenyans and especially youth to peacefully influence the governance of their own lives Further Cooper argues that Kenyan students actions challenge the existing complacency with the globalized agenda of education for all demonstrating that submissive despondency is not the only possible response to the failed promises of education to transform material and social inequalities
