from the vast number of Rembrandtesque paintings made by his many apprentices and followers Having opted for a chronological approach to the cataloguing of Rembrandt's paintings from 1625 till 1642 in the first three volumes it was decided in 1993 to adopt a thematic approach for further volumes This was largely to facilitate the recognition of different hands The new approach yielded much more information not only about Rembrandt's working methods but also about the function and meaning of his works This expanded field of view meant that etchings and drawings with similar themes also needed to be included In 2005 Volume IV appeared devoted to Rembrandt's self portraits in painting etching and drawing Volume V consists of a catalogue and analysis of the so called small scale history and genre paintings That theme was chosen because this type of complex work shows a variety of full length protagonists acting in different narrative settings For this reason in the 17th century painting etching or drawing biblical and mythological scenes was looked upon as an artist's greatest challenge The choice of this theme proved to be highly fruitful in several ways Small scale history pieces reveal Rembrandt's artistic ambitions most clearly They also offer the authors a much more accurate view of the daily routine in Rembrandt's studio his apprentices mostly copied this type of work or used it as a starting point for their own As a result it was easier to distinguish the works by the master himself from those of his pupils All aspects of the skills necessary to create a pictorial illusion play a part in the creation of small figured history paintings These aspects were referred to as the basis of the noble art of painting in Rembrandt's days Two seventeenth century painter theoreticians discussed these principles systematically in two books which up till now have only sporadically been consulted in the context of 17th century studio practice Karel van Mander wrote his Grond der edel vry schilder const Basis of the Art of Painting in 1604 and Samuel van Hoogstraten produced his Inleyding tot de hooge schoole der schilder konst Academy of Painting in 1678 Van Hoogstraten was a pupil of Rembrandt between 1642 and 48 Comparing the two books and considering them in relation to Rembrandt's oeuvre gradually reveals his original views on painting and how these had developed during his career Thus the authors of this new Volume of A Corpus have gained an unexpected and profound insight into Rembrandt's ideas and approach to his art The basic aspects of painting included the following topics function and methods of drawing human proportions various positions poses and gestures of figures ways of arranging a scene's protagonists in a composition facial expressions of a variety of emotions light shadows and reflected light landscape and animals draperies and articles of clothing methods of painting and various characteristics and uses of colours The way these basic aspects were selected and dealt with presumed that the more practical side to the art of painting would be learned by the apprentice in the daily routine of his master's studio With the development of art history in the nineteenth century the basic aspects of the art of painting listed above acquired the vague label of style However the seventeenth century categorization of the basic aspects provides a much more acute means of probing the views and criteria for judging a painting by Rembrandt and his contemporaries than the concept of style Volume V in the series A Corpus of Rembrandt Paintings breaks new ground from the point of view of art history not only in its approach to Rembrandt as an artist but more particularly to his thinking about painting Moreover a detailed comparison of Rembrandt's works and those by his apprentices who based their works on his led to a profound and detailed understanding of Rembrandt's views on pictorial quality In art historical literature quality usually does not feature prominently since it is regarded as being too subjective This comparative approach together with the analysis of seventeenth century categories of thought about painting have given the research on Rembrandt a new impetus at the same time allowing us to see more clearly through seventeenth century eyes That is why the new volume of the Corpus is an important publication not only for art historians but also for all who want to fully enjoy the numerous works of art that date back to the Dutch Golden Age now scattered in museums around the world

Rembrandt's Roughness Nicola Suthor,2018-04-03 Roughness is the sensual quality most often associated with Rembrandt s idiosyncratic style It best defines the specific structure of his painterly textures which subtly capture and engage the imagination of the beholder Rembrandt s Roughness examines how the artist s unconventional technique pushed the possibilities of painting into startling and unexpected realms Drawing on the phenomenological insights of Edmund Husserl as well as firsthand accounts by Rembrandt s contemporaries Nicola Suthor provides invaluable new perspectives on many of the painter s best known masterpieces including The Anatomy Lesson of Dr

Deyman The Return of the Prodigal Son and Aristotle with a Bust of Homer She focuses on pictorial phenomena such as the thickness of the paint material the visibility of the colored priming and the dramatizing element of chiaroscuro showing how they constitute Rembrandt's most effective tools for extending the representational limits of painting Sutor explores how Rembrandt developed a visually precise handling of his artistic medium that forced his viewers to confront the paint itself as a source of meaning its challenging complexity expressed in the subtlest stroke of his brush A beautifully illustrated meditation on a painter like no other Rembrandt's Roughness reflects deeply on the intellectual challenge that Rembrandt's unrivaled artistry posed to the art theory of his time and its eminent role in the history of art today Bulletin of Photography, 1908

Old World Masters in New World Collections Esther Singleton, There are no beginnings of art in Italy The old civilizations of Etruria Rome and Byzantium never perished entirely and upon their surviving traditions Christian Art was built Old pictorial ideas and old decorative motives were absorbed rearranged and worked over again and again in conjunction with theological dogma until in the Thirteenth Century largely owing to the beautiful character ideals and influence of St Francis to the intellectual teachings of Dante and to the fervor aroused by the Crusades Christian Art became a living movement which inspired among other important things the creation of magnificent Cathedrals When the architects the carvers of wood and stone and the makers of the jewel like windows had finished their work the best painters of the day were called on to produce altar pieces that would stimulate religious devotion charm the worshippers by beauty and instruct the people unaccustomed to books by representation of saintly lives and scriptural stories Italian Painting in the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Centuries thus shows many of the old Byzantine traditions still lingering in the new Christian or Gothic Art Siena and Florence were the chief early Italian Schools Siena was at first the more important of the two and greatly influenced Florentine and also French Painting The leading early artists of Siena were Guido da Siena Duccio di Buoninsegna Ugo da Siena Segna di Bonaventura Simone Martini Lippo Memmi Pietro Lorenzetti Ambrogio Lorenzetti Lippo Vanni Andrea Vanni Bartolo di Fredi Taddeo di Bartolo and Stefano di Giovanni Sassetta The next group includes Domenico di Bartolo Lorenzo Vecchietta Neroccio di Landi Benvenuto di Giovanni Girolamo di Benvenuto and Matteo di Giovanni To understand and appreciate the painting of Siena one should think of it as the culmination of the art of the Middle Ages rather than as a promise of anything modern Therein lies the difference which caused so great a gulf between the art of Siena and that of contemporary Florence only forty miles away Sienese Art may be regarded as the most perfect expression of the Byzantine ideal It was hieratic and mystic While Giotto was forecasting the development of modern art by studying nature and making his figures act like the real people whom he saw about him Duccio and Simone Martini were sounding the Byzantine creed that the Christian saints were not human but divine not vulgar but regal not approachable but aloof To the early Sienese as to the Byzantine the Raphaellesque conception of the Madonna as the most tender possible human mother would have been blasphemous bad taste Although Sienese Art was founded on Byzantine and was in a sense the culmination of Byzantine it was nevertheless a Gothic art In other words it belonged to its period but it selected certain elements of Gothic style for emphasis In Florence Giotto was inspired by the plasticity of Gothic Art and its naturalism In Siena Duccio and his followers developed the Gothic living line and later the emotionalism of Gothic spirit Thus both Florentines and Sienese were Gothic but in a different way Technically as well as spiritually the Sienese approached the artistic abstractions of China and Japan The analogies between Sienese and Oriental Art have been observed by practically every writer on the Sienese School They have been tacitly attributed however to accidental similarities in ideals and modes in Siena and the East As yet no one has been bold enough to suggest an influence derived from actual contact with Eastern Art but such contact is not beyond the bounds of possibility In the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Centuries overland communication with the Near East and with China was common and secure Merchants like the Polos prelates like John of Monte Corsino Andrew of Perugia and Friar Odoric of Friuli readily found the way to Cathay as China was then called Peking was made a Roman Catholic diocese and Pegolotti of the Bardi banking house in Florence was moved to write a traveller s itinerary remarkably like a modern Baedeker giving the most minute instructions as to inns food servants and so forth on the route from Constantinople to Peking Moslems like Ibn Batuta travelled as widely as Christians and Oriental travellers visited the Occident Thus Bar Sauma a Nestorian of Peking visited the Pope in 1287 and passed through Tuscany on his way to Paris and Bordeaux two years after Duccio painted the Rucellai Madonna Not only the Near East and China but India was opened to the European and we hear of the martyrdom of one Brother Peter of Siena at a place near Bombay It was not until the end of the Fourteenth and the beginning of the Fifteenth Century that the conversion of the western Tartars to Islam the advance of the Seljuk Turks and the overthrow of the broad minded hospitable Mongol dynasty in China closed the overland trade routes During the next hundred and fifty years while the sea routes were being discovered Europe seems largely to have forgotten the existence of the Orient Wild as the theory may sound therefore it is possible that actual contact with Oriental Art may account not only for the occasional Mongolian types and bits of Oriental armor to be observed in Sienese Art but even for something of the spirit of the style
