Black France Dominic Thomas, 2007 Without a doubt one of the most important studies so far completed on literature in French grounded in the experiences of migrants of sub Saharan African origin Alec Hargreaves Florida State University France has always hosted a rich and vibrant black presence within its borders But recent violent events have raised questions about France's treatment of ethnic minorities Challenging the identity politics that have set immigrants against the mainstream Black France explores how black expressive culture has been reformulated as global culture in the multicultural and multinational spaces of France Thomas brings forward questions such as Why is France a privileged site of civilization Who is French Who is an immigrant Who controls the networks of production Black France poses an urgently needed reassessment of the French colonial legacy

Africa and France Dominic Thomas, 2013-03-20 An excellent and incisive look at identity immigration and culture in postcolonial France Journal of West African History This stimulating and insightful book reveals how increased control over immigration has changed cultural and social production in theater literature and even museum construction Dominic Thomas's analysis unravels the complex cultural and political realities of long standing mobility between Africa and Europe Thomas questions the attempt to place strict limits on what it means to be French or European and offers a sense of what must happen to bring about a renewed sense of integration and global Frenchness Essential reading for anyone investigating the debates surrounding contemporary French identity and the ever changing relationship between France and her former colonial possessions African Studies Bulletin

The Cambridge Companion to the African Novel Abiola Irele, 2009-07-23 An overview of the key novels and novelists of the continent covering multiple cultures and languages

The Negritude Movement Reiland Rabaka, 2015-05-20 The Negritude Movement provides readers with not only an intellectual history of the Negritude Movement but also its prehistory W E B Du Bois the New Negro Movement and the Harlem Renaissance and its posthistory Frantz Fanon and the evolution of Fanonism By viewing Negritude as an insurgent idea to invoke this book's intentionally incendiary subtitle as opposed to merely a form of poetics and aesthetics The Negritude Movement explores Negritude as a traveling theory la Edward Said's concept that consistently crisscrossed the Atlantic Ocean in the twentieth century from Harlem to Haiti Haiti to Paris Paris to Martinique Martinique to Senegal and on and on ad infinitum The Negritude Movement maps the movements of proto Negritude concepts from Du Bois's discourse in The Souls of Black Folk through to post-Négritude concepts in Fanon's Black Skin White Masks and The Wretched of the Earth. Utilizing Négritude as a conceptual framework to on the one hand explore the African intellectual tradition in the twentieth century and on the other hand demonstrate discursive continuity between Du Bois and Fanon as well as the Harlem Renaissance and Négritude Movement. The Négritude Movement ultimately accents what Négritude contributed to arguably its greatest intellectual heir Frantz Fanon and the development of his distinct critical theory Fanonism. Rabaka argues that if Fanon and Fanonism remain relevant in the twenty-first century then to a certain extent Négritude remains relevant in the twenty-first century.

Transnational French Studies Alec G. Hargreaves, Charles Forsdick, David Murphy, 2012-01-01. The 2007 manifesto in favour of a Littérature mondiale en français has generated new debates in both francophone and postcolonial studies. Praised by some for breaking down the hierarchical division between French and Francophone literatures, the manifesto has been criticized by others for recreating that division through an exoticizing vision that continues to privilege the publishing industry of the former colonial metropole. Does the manifesto signal the advent of a new critical paradigm destined to render obsolescent those of francophone and/or postcolonial studies? Or is it simply a passing fad, a glitzy but ephemeral publicity stunt generated and promoted by writers and publishing executives vis-à-vis whom scholars and critics should maintain a skeptical distance? Does it offer an all-embracing transnational vista leading beyond the confines of postcolonialism or reintroduce an incipient form of neocolonialism even while proclaiming the end of the centre-periphery divide? In addressing these questions leading scholars of French Francophone and postcolonial studies from around the globe help to assess the wider question of the evolving status of French Studies as a transnational field of study amid the challenges of globalization.

Black France / France Noire Trica Danielle Keaton, 2012-06-26. In Black France, France Noire scholars, activists, and novelists address the paradox of race in France: the state does not acknowledge race as a meaningful category but experiences of anti-black racism belie claims of color blindness.

French Global Christie McDonald, Susan Rubin Suleiman, 2010. Recasting French literary history in terms of the cultures and peoples that interacted within and outside of France's national boundaries, this volume offers a new way of looking at the history of a national literature along with a truly global and contemporary understanding of language literature and culture The relationship between France's national territory and other regions of the world where French is spoken and written most of them former colonies has long been central to discussions of Francophonie Boldly expanding such discussions to the whole range of French literature the essays in this volume explore spaces mobilities and multiplicities from the Middle Ages to today They rethink literary history not in terms of national boundaries as traditional literary histories have done but in terms of a global paradigm that emphasizes border crossings and encounters with others Contributors offer new ways of reading canonical texts and considering other texts that are not part of the traditional canon By emphasizing diverse conceptions of language text space and nation these essays establish a model approach that remains sensitive to the specificities of time and place and to the theoretical concerns informing the study of national literatures in the twenty first century

New Francophone African and Caribbean Theatres John Conteh-Morgan, 2010-08-03 John Conteh Morgan explores the multiple ways in which African and Caribbean theatres have combined aesthetic ceremonial experimental and avant garde practices in order to achieve sharp critiques of the nationalist and postnationalist state and to elucidate the concerns of the francophone world More recent changes have introduced a transnational dimension replacing concerns with national and ethnic solidarity in favor of irony and self reflexivity New Francophone African and Caribbean Theatres places these theatres at the heart of contemporary debates on global cultural and political practices and offers a more finely tuned understanding of performance in diverse diasporic networks

Representations of Child Soldiers in Contemporary African Narratives Ademola Adesola, 2024-09-11 In Representations of Child Soldiers in Contemporary African Narratives Ademola Adesola examines the dominant factors that writers privilege in their portrayals of child soldiering in sub Saharan Africa In his textual interpretive analyses of selected novels in the African child soldier genre Adesola contends that critical discussions of African child soldier literature have depended on the interpretive frameworks supplied by Western humanitarian discourses which oversimplify and de historicize experiences of war in Africa The author argues that such reductive decontextualization of war realities serve to champion a narrow vision of war in African contexts centered on a moral and humanitarian urge for Western intervention Regardless of whether the casus belli legitimating those wars are genuine or not those conflicts and children's involvement in them are understood within the same racist colonial and ethnocentric stereotypes about Africa that have been privileged in Western thought and the Western moral political imagination for centuries Thus in studying African child soldier narratives this book provides an alternative reading of novels whose settings feature African ethnopolitical conflicts such as in Sierra Leone Liberia Congo Brazzaville Nigeria notable for their exploitation of children for military ends The author maintains that these works are significant in the varying ways they reify and challenge the Western ideas of child and childhood as well as privilege child soldiers as social actors whose intricate makeups disavow being simply understood as innocent victims or irredeemable perpetrators of atrocities

Globalizing the Postcolony Claire H. Griffiths, 2010-12-18 Globalizing the Postcolony Contesting Discourses of Gender and Development in Francophone Africa is a study of development in the former French colonies of West Africa It takes as its starting point the international community's reporting on human and social development and gender in the developing areas which began systematically in 1990 and which has provided a framework for policy making in this field International reports suggest that the francophone African countries have been experiencing low levels of social development throughout the past two decades These levels fall dramatically when the factor of gender is introduced to the point where statistically speaking francophone African women have had less access to social development than any other population in the world This study analyzes current thinking on the challenges facing gender and development in Africa before moving on to examine the historical factors marking the gender and development profile of the francophone West African region Through an analysis of gender politics in the region from pre colonial to postcolonial times the book examines the gradual incursion of exogenous gender policies into the region throughout the 20th century The discussion concludes by arguing that despite the tendency of the international community and their colonial administrative forebears to pursue one size fits all solutions to what they identified as the main development challenges of the day the impact of standardized solutions remains subject to the unique historical and cultural context in which they are implemented Adapting formula driven policies to unique cultural contexts constitutes a major challenge for gender and development politics in the second decade of the new century Meanwhile the book coincides with the introduction of a new international development agenda in Africa articulated around issues of security and globalization While civil unrest continues to destabilize vast
