National Civic Review, No. 1, Spring 2003 Robert Loper, 2003-04-01 This issue confirms the National Civic League's continuing dedication to seek out the promising developments at the local level that can help reinvigorate our democracy Articles celebrate the active role that citizens in concert with local government officials and members of the private and nonprofit sectors play in communities across the country Contributors also highlight the potential impact of such local and state level civic engagement can have on national trends in political reform particularly in the highly active area of campaign finance reform Case studies from the field include an analysis of the response to the Los Angeles disturbances a decade later that emphasizes the prominent role that grassroots organizations have had in crafting efforts to make changes there The city manager of Chico California takes a searching look at the public hearing process and makes applicable suggestions for improving its efficacy as a tool for citizen involvement Richard C Harwood founder and president of The Harwood Institute for Public Innovation contributes a thoughtful essay on patriotism and the devotion we all need to bring to the public square as we take up our responsibilities for the common good National Civic Review, No. 3, Fall 2001 Robert Loper, 2001-11-16 This issue explores the force that information technologies exert on the direction of our society and its implications for democracy The articles complement the 2001 National Civic League national conference on governance titled Digital Democracy and explore a range of themes surrounding the ongoing development of e democracy With a sufficient track record showing how well and to what ends information based technologies are being used contributors examine specific topics including public library contributions to civic connectivity the potential of a more citizen centric government the move from paper based transactions to digitized operations and network structures that can connect governments the private sector and nonprofit organizations Models of effective online civic engagement from CitiStat and the Baltimore Neighborhood Indicators Alliance and the Building Better Citizens program of Jacksonville Florida are also presented The contributors show that the Internet has become a means for public deliberation and civic engagement that has a long future of achievement ahead      National Civic Review, No. 2 NCR (National Civic Review), 2001-09-11 This issue explores the legacy of Election 2000 and its inability to ensure that all duly registered voters can vote and that all their votes can be counted The implications for our future as a democracy continue to drive election reform efforts with Democrats focusing on identifying and removing barriers to voting and Republicans raising concerns over voter fraud Contributors to this issue argue that the outcome of Election 2000 should not be seen as an aberration but as an expression of how our political system currently works and that voting reform is only one topic in the wider debate on political reform in general Topics address include campaign finance reform in light of the McCain Feingold bill as well as a number of developments at the state and local levels ranging from Clean Money Clean Election agreements to partial public financing systems Other areas of the electoral process scrutinized include the role of the Electoral College barriers to third party candidates as personally encountered by Green Party candidate Ralph Nader and equitable access to free airtime in media Innovative political reform at state and local levels is also examined with models provided from New York City s campaign finance system as well as a variety of reform measures around the country Articles include Citizen Democracy Dorothy Ridings Federal Campaign Finance Reform The Long and Winding Road Scott Harshbarger Edwin Davis Localism and Reform The Benefits of Political Diversity Carl Castillo Mike McGrath New York City s Campaign Finance System Why Is the Best Hope for Reform Being Ignored Mark Schmitt Free Airtime Another Means for Cleaning Up Campaigns Matt Farey So You Want to Run for President Ha Barriers to Third Party Entry Ralph Nader Theresa Amato Who Should Elect the President The Case Against the Electoral College Carolyn Jefferson Jenkins Renewed Momentum for Voting System Reform Rob Richie Steven Hill Voting Reforms After Florida Caleb Kleppner What Does It Mean to Be a Good Citizen Charles Bens HEALTHY COMMUNITIES At a Crossroad Gregory Maher      National Civic Review, No. 1, Spring 1998 Jossey-Bass Publishers, NCR, 1998-03-01 Campaign finance low voter turnout the influence of public opinion polls proportional representation and emerging technology online and at the voting booth this issue is a comprehensive review of the many issues surrounding political reform at the beginning of the twenty first century Acknowledging their roots in the Progressive Era of the twentieth century contributors from the National Civic League call for a clear eyed commitment from all sectors to face today's challenges nationally and present lessons already learned from successful local and regional programs. Articles highlight promising trends in volunteerism among young people and grassroots movements in campaign finance reform in Texas and Minnesota. Specific programs in political education such as an innovative civic education project in Phoenix that develops the habits of responsible citizenship and voting in children are also examined. Focusing on the core issues of democracy, participation, influence, and access, this issue is more than an overview of challenges met and challenges ahead on the progressive agenda of American democracy. It is an inspirational call to begin the work that is before us.

National Civic Review, Summer 2000 Jossey-Bass Publishers, NCR Staff, 2000-08-01. Accompanying the National Civic League's 105th Conference on Governance entitled New Politics for a New Century, this issue is an impassioned argument against the common assumptions of citizen apathy as a reason for decreasing public engagement in the democratic process. Instead, contributors reveal a sophisticated citizenry with just cause for anger over the obstacles to good government and social change and their growing media-fed presumption of bad intent from our political leadership. In the face of these daunting factors, this issue examines positive trends in rising politics of volunteerism and philanthropy while demonstrating that these are not the sole solution to collectively effecting social change in our country. Instead, chapters demonstrate methods that the whole tradition of the good government movement can be reengaged to make government more responsive and explore the promise of merging traditional good government movement goals with the active and successful empowerment and poverty movements emerging from communities of color. Other topics discussed include outreach to youth, media accountability, and linking political processes to specific outcomes. Even the concept of political reform, initially developed as a tool to place barriers against the types of fraud and abuses common in voter participation over a hundred years ago, is subject to reform itself. With this issue, the National Civic League offers a powerful resource for those up to facing the task.
