

12 The Roots of Modern Hungarian Nationalism

A Case Study and a Research Agenda

László Marác

The Hungarian proverb 'A nyelvében él a nemzet' ('The nation lives in its language') expresses the fact that the Hungarian language is the most prominent feature of modern Hungarian nationalism. Although this proverb has been documented only from the mid-nineteenth century, I will attempt to demonstrate in this chapter that the Hungarian language is one of the core features of early modern Hungarian nationhood as well.<sup>1</sup> Native knowledge of the Hungarian language is a prerequisite for claiming Hungarian national and cultural identity.<sup>2</sup> As a consequence, only native speakers of Hungarian are considered to be members of the Hungarian nation. Note that this presupposes an ethnie, an ethno-linguistic community in the sense of Anthony Smith.<sup>3</sup> This also implies that the ethno-linguistic community is an antecedent to the development of the modern Hungarian nation. Hence, language is one of the most important roots of modern Hungarian nationalism. If this implication is correct, the question arises regarding how Hungarian nationalism should be analysed within the different theoretical paradigms available in the scholarly literature.

The scholarly literature on the origins of nationalism has been dominated by the modernist account elaborated in the work of Hobsbawm and Gellner.<sup>4</sup> The central thesis of the modernist account, contrary to the traditionalist one, is that modern nationhood is an artificial by-product of the 'Great Transformation' produced by the French and the Industrial Revolutions. From this thesis the claim follows that modern nationhood has no premodern, historical antecedents whatsoever. To put it differently, the modernist school claims that there is a radical disjuncture between premodern, existing ethnicities and nation-state formation. However, the work of scholars like Anderson, Holton, May and Smith leaves open the possibility of a 'third' position that postulates a connection between modern nationhood and premodern ethnicity.<sup>5</sup> Although Anderson's position on nation formation falls into the modernist school, there is a contradiction in his work. His notion of 'print capitalism' explains the spread of languages that is central to the forming of homogeneous speech communities and

Fenyő, 1997-02-05 Andrew Ludanyi Canadian Review of Studies in Nationalism      Metaphor and National Identity Orsolya Putz, 2019-12-15 Due to the Treaty of Trianon which was signed at the end of World War 1 in 1920 Hungary lost two thirds of its former territory as well as the inhabitants of these areas The book aims to reveal why the treaty still plays a role in Hungarian national identity construction by studying the alternative conceptualization of the treaty and its consequences The cognitive linguistic research explores Hungarian politicians conceptual system about Trianon with special interest on conceptual metaphors It also analyzes the factors that may motivate the emergence of the conceptual system as well as its synchronic diversity and diachronic changes The monograph provides a niche insight into the conceptual basis of how contemporary citizens of Hungary interpret the treaty of Trianon and its consequences The book will be of interest to cognitive and cultural linguists cultural anthropologists or any professionals working on national identity construction      Sport, Representation and Evolving Identities in Europe Philip Dine, Seán Crosson, 2010 Sport annually mobilizes millions of people across Europe as practitioners in a wide variety of competitive educational or recreational contexts and as spectators who are physically present or following events through the mass media This book presents original research into modern sport funded by the Irish Research Council for the Humanities and Social Sciences Its aim is to examine the distinctive contribution made by this complex phenomenon to the construction of European identities Attention is focused on sport's social significance as a set of mass mediated practices and spectacles giving rise to a network of images symbols and discourses The book seeks to explore and ultimately to explain the processes of representation and mediation involved in the sporting construction and subsequent renegotiation of local national and increasingly global identities It offers a survey of key developments in sporting Europe from the mid nineteenth century to the present and from the Atlantic to the Urals presenting findings by acknowledged international experts and emerging scholars at the level of individuals communities regions nation states and Europe as a whole in both its geographical and political incarnations Its focus on representation offers a broadly conceived and consciously inclusive approach to issues of Europeanness in modern and contemporary sport      Liberal and Illiberal Nationalisms R. Taras, 2002-07-05 How people construct their idea of home influences the types of nationalisms that emerge in various parts of the world These nationalisms can be inclusive or exclusionary tolerant or intolerant peaceful or violent In this important new book Ray Taras provides a comprehensive analysis of the history and study of nationalism He describes what happens when home is defined as empire Russia and India secessionist state KwaZulu and Quebec uninational Volkstaat Germany and Israel or transnational community Islam and anti Americanism Finally he explores the idea that the mantra of multiculturalism has fuelled conflicts over what home is and generates divisions within and between communities

National Narcissism Eric Beckett Weaver, 2006 National Narcissism offers a groundbreaking anthropological and sociological approach to nationalism through an expos of the belief systems and psychology of extreme nationalists for whom nationalism is a form of religion This theoretical approach is illustrated with examples primarily taken from Hungary with a special focus in two chapters on the role of gender in nationalism The state of politics and society in Hungary is also examined in a way that steps beyond the usual simplistic flat narratives of what Hungarians are like by stressing the broad variety of viewpoints current in Hungarian society the milieu in which a small minority of extreme nationalists are able to make their voice heard out of proportion to their numbers or political support The theory offered by National Narcissism has wide ranging implications for the future study of extremist nationalism in nation states throughout the world Sociologists anthropologists nationalism studies specialists social psychologists and historians of the recent past in Hungary will find that this theoretical book richly illustrated with examples from Hungarian society challenges positive and negative stereotypes about nationalism extremism post communism central and eastern Europe the European Union and not least about Hungarians themselves

Jews, Nazis and the Cinema of Hungary David Frey, 2017-02-28 Between 1929 and 1942 Hungary s motion picture industry experienced meteoric growth It leapt into Europe s top echelon trailing only Nazi Germany and Italy in feature output Yet by 1944 Hungary s cinema was in shambles internal and external forces having destroyed its unification experiments and productive capacity This original cultural and political history examines the birth unexpected ascendance and wartime collapse of Hungary s early sound cinema by placing it within a complex international nexus Detailing the interplay of Hungarian cultural and political elites Jewish film professionals and financiers Nazi officials and global film moguls David Frey demonstrates how the transnational process of forging an industry designed to define a national culture proved particularly contentious and surprisingly contradictory in the heyday of racial nationalism and antisemitism

Radical Right Parties in Central and Eastern Europe Bartek Pytlas, 2015-10-16 In Central and Eastern Europe radical right actors significantly impact public debates and mainstream policy agenda But despite this high discursive influence the electoral fortune of radical right parties in the region is much less stable It has been suggested that this may be due to the fact that mainstream competitors increasingly co opt issues which are fundamental for the radical right However the extent to which such tactics play a role in radical right electoral success and failure is still a subject for debate This book is the first to provide a systematic theoretical framework and in depth empirical research on the interaction between discursive influence party competition and the electoral fortune of radical right parties in Central and Eastern Europe It argues that in order to fully explain the impact of mainstream party strategies in this regard it is vital to widen the analysis beyond competition over issues themselves and towards their various legitimizing narratives and frame ownership Up to date debates over policies of collective identity minority morality and nationalizing politics in Hungary Poland and Slovakia serve as best cases to observe these under researched phenomena The analytical model is evaluated comparatively using original primary data combined with election studies and expert surveys Advancing an innovative fine grained approach on the mechanisms and effects of party competition between radical right and mainstream parties this book will be of interest to students and scholars researching the far right and European party politics as well as political contestation and framing
