Posner, Oscar S.M. Marin, 2016-09-19 Originally published in 1985 this volume presents the proceedings of the 11th International Symposium on Attention and Performance With few exceptions the central emphasis in previous meetings of the Attention and Performance Association was on the information processing approach to normal human cognition This emphasis had been supplemented on occasion by studies employing EEG methods but there had not been systematic attempts to relate the information processing approach to work in the neurosciences This volume seeks to emphasize the search for mechanism with such methods of approach as the following anatomical physiological neuropsychological behavioral and computational The editors believed that this was in accord with recent developing trends in cognition and particularly with developments in the study of attention at the time The Variable Mind? How Apparently Inconsistent Effects Might Inform Model Building Simona Amenta, Davide Crepaldi, 2016-10-31 Model building is typically based on the identification of a set of established facts in any given field of research insofar as the model is then evaluated on how well it accounts for these facts Psychology and specifically visual word identification and reading is no exception in this sense e.g. Amenta Coltheart et al 2001 Grainger Marelli et al 2013 Kinoshita and Norris 2009 or even individual differences Andrews ii highlight new context dependent experimental effects in a way that is informative on the dynamics of the underlying cognitive processing iii shed new light on known context dependent experimental effects again in a way that enhances their theoretical informativeness Bridging Reading Aloud and Speech Production Simone Sulpizio, Sachiko Kinoshita, 2016-07-25 For decades human cognition involved in reading aloud and speech production has been investigated extensively a quote search of the two in google scholar produces about 83 000 and 255 000 results respectively This large amount of research has produced quite detailed descriptions of the cognitive mechanisms that allow people to speak or to read aloud a word However despite the fact that reading aloud and speech production share some processes generation of phonology and preparation of a motor speech response the research in this two areas seems to have taken parallel and independent tracks with almost no contact between the two The present Research Topic takes an initial step towards building a bridge that will link the two research areas as we believe that such an endeavour is essential for moving forward in our understanding of how the mind brain processes words To this aim we encourage contributions exploring the relation between speech production and reading aloud The questions the Research Topic should address include but are not limited to the following To what extent are speech production and word reading reading aloud similar Are there some shared components and or mechanisms between the two process Is the time course of the supposed shared mechanisms activation similar in the two processes How does the different input conceptual vs orthographic interact with the types of information that reading and speaking share semantic and phonological knowledge articulatory codes How does a difference in the input affect the supposed common stages of processing i.e. phonological encoding and articulatory planning and execution We welcome any kind of contribution e.g. original research article review opinion that answers the above or other questions related to the Topic Processing Across Languages Shelia Kennison, 2018-02-28 The Research Topic aims to highlight research on the processing of words sentences and discourses across languages Articles representing processing in a wide variety of human languages will be featured Efforts will be made to have articles representing as many language families as possible The methodology used to investigate language processing is open Manuscripts may report studies involving monolinguals or individuals knowing more than one language Research addressing the extent to which all human languages are processed similarly are welcomed as are studies investigating the extent to which the different types of linguistic knowledge are stored differently in memory Masked Priming Sachiko Kinoshita, Stephen J. Lupker, 2004-06-02 This book showcases the advantages of masked priming as an alternative to more standard methods of studying language

Accessing Conceptual Representations for Speaking Peter Indefrey, Ian FitzPatrick, 2016-10-31 For speaking words in the lexicon are somehow activated from conceptual representations but we know surprisingly little about how this works precisely Which of the attributes of the concept DOG e g BARKS IS WALKED WITH A LEASH CARNIVORE ANIMATE have to be activated in a given situation to be able to select the word dog Are there things we know about dogs that are always activated for naming and others that are only activated in certain contexts or even never To date investigations on lexical access in speaking have largely focused on the effects of distractor nouns on the naming latency of a target noun We have learned that distractors from the same semantic category e g cat hinder naming but associatively related distractors leash may facilitate or hinder naming However associatively related words can have all kinds of semantic relationships to a target word and with few exceptions the effects of specific semantic relationships other than membership in the same category as the target concept have not been systematically investigated This special issue aims at moving forward towards a more detailed account of how precisely conceptual information is used to access the lexicon in speaking and what corresponding format of conceptual representations needs to be assumed

Basic Processes in Reading Derek Besner, Glyn W. Humphreys, 2012-11-12 The chapters in this new book span the range of reading processes from early visual analysis to semantic influences on word identification thus providing a state of the art summary of current work and offering important contributions to prospective reading research Basic Processes in Reading examines both future plans and past accomplishments in the world of word identification research Three chapters provide a futuristic view taking a parallel distributed processing approach to semantic priming phonology and the identification of old words and the learning of new words Reviews on eye movements in reading and semantic priming on word identification provide a retrospective summary of work on these issues as well as solid pointers for future investigations Other chapters provide new demonstrations of the importance of phonological contributions to word identification of interactive processes in the identification of handwritten words and a re evaluation of the processes involved in the neuropsychological syndrome described as letter by letter reading

Perspectives on Sentence Processing Charles Clifton, Jr., Lyn Frazier, Keith Rayner, Charles Clifton, 2015-12-22 One of the liveliest forums for sharing psychological linguistic philosophical and computer science perspectives on psycholinguistics has been the annual meeting of the CUNY Sentence Processing Conference Documenting the state of the art in several important approaches to sentence processing this volume consists of selected papers that had been presented at the Sixth CUNY Conference The editors not only present the main themes that ran through the conference but also honor the breadth of the presentations from disciplines including linguistics experimental psychology and computer science The variety of sentence processing topics examined includes how evoked brain potentials reflect sentence comprehension how auditory words are processed how various sources of grammatical and nongrammatical information are coordinated and used how sentence processing and language acquisition might be related This distinctive volume not only presents the most exciting current work in sentence processing but also places this research into the broader context of theorizing about it

Current Research and Emerging Directions in Emotion-Cognition Interactions Florin Dolcos, Lihong Wang, Mara Mather, 2015-03-02 Emotion can impact various aspects of our cognition and behavior by enhancing or impairing them e g enhanced attention to and memory for emotional events or increased distraction produced by goal irrelevant emotional information On the other hand emotion processing is also susceptible to cognitive influences typically exerted in the form of cognitive control of motion or emotion regulation Despite important recent progress in understanding emotion cognition interactions a number of aspects remain unclear The present book comprises a collection of manuscripts discussing emerging evidence regarding the mechanisms underlying emotion cognition interactions in healthy functioning and alterations associated with clinical conditions in which such interactions are dysfunctional Initiated with a more restricted focus targeting 1 identification and in depth analysis of the circumstances in which emotion enhances or impairs cognition and 2 identification of the role of individual differences in these effects our book has emerged into a comprehensive collection of outstanding contributions investigating emotion cognition interactions based on approaches spanning from behavioral and lesion to pharmacological and brain imaging and including empirical theoretical and review papers alike Co hosted by the Frontiers in Neuroscience Integrative Neuroscience and Frontiers in Psychology Emotion Science the contributions comprising our book and the associated research topic are grouped around the following seven main themes distributed across the two hosting journals I Emotion and Selectivity in Attention and Memory II The Impact of Emotional Distraction Linking Enhancing and Impairing Effects of Emotion III What Really is the Role of the Amygdala IV Age Differences in Emotion Processing The Role of Emotional Valence V Affective Face Processing Social Cognition and Personality Neuroscience VI Stress Mood Emotion and the Prefrontal Cortex The Role of Control in the Stress Response VII Emotion Cognition Interactions in Clinical Conditions As illustrated by the present collection of contributions emotion cognition interactions can be identified at different levels of processing from perception and attention to long term memory decision making processes and social cognition and behavior Notably these effects are subject to individual differences that may affect the way we perceive experience and remember emotional experiences or cope with emotionally challenging situations Moreover these opposing effects tend to co occur in affective disorders such as depression and PTSD where uncontrolled recollection of and rumination on distressing memories also lead to impaired cognition due to emotional distraction Understanding the nature and neural mechanisms of these effects is critical as their exacerbation and co occurrence in clinical conditions lead to devastating effects and debilitation Hence bringing together such diverse contributions has allowed not only an integrative understanding of the current extant evidence but also identification of emerging directions and concrete venues for future investigations

Unconscious information processing in executive control Nicola De Pisapia, The aim of this Frontiers Research Topic is to review and further explore the topic of unconscious processing in executive control Executive control refers to the ability of the human brain mostly associated with prefrontal cortex activity to regulate the processing involved in the execution of novel or complex goal directed tasks Previous studies or models of human cognition have assumed that executive control necessarily requires conscious processing of information This perspective is in line with common sense and personal introspection which suggest that our choices are intentional and based on conscious stimuli Nevertheless in the last few years several behavioural and cognitive neuroscience studies have put under scrutiny this assumption Cumulating evidence is now showing that prefrontal executive control can involve or be triggered by unconscious processing of information with consequent effects on observed behaviours One of the main methods adopted to study such unconscious mechanisms is masked priming consisting in presenting visually masked stimuli which nonetheless are shown to affect goal directed behaviour or influence constructs linked to executive control and prefrontal cortex activity e g task set representation response inhibition conflict monitoring error detection reward processing emotion regulation and task switching This area of research is relatively young and while scientific evidence is emerging no general consensus has been reached yet on how to interpret these early findings some researchers accept that executive control can involve unconscious processing others momentarily put aside in first approximation this issue others criticize this possibility on theoretical grounds e g pointing to the need of better definitions of terms such as control conflict and consciousness or based on experimental findings At this stage it appears necessary that researchers in the field make a collective effort to deepen the understanding of the unconscious mechanisms involved in executive control This Research Topic will focus on neuroscience but it will welcome contributions on purely behavioural and psychophysiological studies patient reports computational investigations as well as philosophical and historical analyses of the relationship between executive control and consciousness In particular we encourage experts in this field to submit contributions in the form of a reviews opinions and discussions on existing literature concerning unconscious processing of information in executive control b original research articles both behavioural only and neuroimaging studies on unconscious processing of information in executive control c discussions and opinions on new methodologies to investigate this issue e g other than masked priming which has been the technique of choice in most of the existing studies Fuzzy Lexical Representations in the Nonnative Mental

Lexicon Kira Gor,Denisa Bordag,Anna Chrabaszcz,Svetlana V. Cook,Andreas Opitz,2022-11-07 Psychology of Learning and Motivation ,1990-01-26 Psychology of Learning and Motivation When Bad Things Happen to Privileged People Dara Z. Strolovitch,2023-07-06 A deep and thought provoking examination of crisis politics and their implications for power and marginalization in the United States From the climate crisis to the opioid crisis to the Coronavirus crisis the language of crisis is everywhere around us and ubiquitous in contemporary American politics and policymaking But for every problem that political actors describe as a crisis there are myriad other equally serious ones that are not described in this way Why has the term crisis been associated with some problems but not others What has crisis come to mean and what work does it do In When Bad Things Happen to Privileged People Dara Z Strolovitch brings a critical eye to the taken for granted political vernacular of crisis Using systematic analyses to trace the evolution of the use of the term crisis by both political elites and outsiders Strolovitch unpacks the idea of crisis in contemporary politics and demonstrates that crisis is itself an operation of politics She shows that racial justice activists innovated the language of crisis in an effort to transform racism from something understood as natural and intractable and to cast it instead as a policy problem that could be remedied Dominant political actors later seized on the language of crisis to compel the use of state power but often in ways that compounded rather than alleviated inequality and injustice In this eye opening and important book Strolovitch demonstrates that understanding crisis politics is key to understanding the politics of racial gender and class inequalities in the early twenty
