China 1979-1989 Barna Talas, 2012-12-06 In our quickly changing world authors who are analyzing the social economic and political processes going on in different countries often find themselves in a situation where the development of processes they have already described take a turn in another direction before their work is in final form or appears in print As a consequence some of their statements are no longer valid More rarely it occurs that after the writing of a book presenting a reform process covering 10 years the writing itself taking one and a half years exceptional events take place in the given country within 1 or 2 months of the delivery of the manuscript that indicate a sharp break in this process one that makes it doubtful whether the process can continue along the same channel This is what has happened to this text and to its author at the beginning of June 1989 when in Beijing after the brutal suppression of student demonstrations and of protests lasting several weeks the General Secretary of the Communist Party of China Zhao Ziyang was relieved of his office and arrested along with several other prominent representatives of reform policy and reform endeavors of the past decade The manuscript of this book was handed over to the publisher on May 4 1989 for editing Immediately thereafter I left for nearly 2 months in the United States consequently I did not receive the manuscript again until in early July

China's Transition from Socialism Dorothy J. Solinger, 1993 The essays in this volume address the industrial commercial urban and regional reforms of China's planned economy during the 1980s The emphasis is on the dominating institutional and bureaucratic presence of the state even as it sought to loosen the pre 1979 vertically structured centralised command system and to introduce some market principles to stimulate economic activity The essays fall into four categories theoretical and policy discussions and debates at the central leadership level reform of the urban economy and of inter regional relations industrial and commercial reforms and the rise and position of the new entrepreneurial class Many of the essays draw on interviews with Chinese economic officials in the Central China city of Wuhan and therefore this is the only study that uses local data on actual operations of reforms from a Chinese city the other sources are the Chinese press and Chinese official and scholarly journals In each of the categories there are pieces from different points in the chronological process of reform This study begins with the first theoretical discussions among China's economists and top political leaders in the late 1970s and concludes with experiments with bankruptcy and stock markets in the late 1980s The countervailing heavy presence of the state at both the policy and the practical levels throughout the reform decade is its unifying theme reforms are usually said to have been caused by the policies of state leaders under Deng Xiaoping. This fascinating new study by one of the West's leading authorities on contemporary China shows however that reforms began and are maintained by local networks. They emerged first in the economy partly as unintended results of previous policies. Agricultural extension in Mao Zedong's time freed so much labor from the land in rich areas such as the Shanghai delta that peasant leaders set up rural industries to employ clients. Many of these leaders were avowed state cadres but they acted for local constituencies more than for Beijing. Their initiatives can be documented in the early 1970s long before the 1978 proclamation of new enterprises which the central bureaucracy could not monitor taking materials and markets away from state industries. This caused socialist control of input prices and commodity flows to collapse by the mid 1980s. As a result shortages and inflation bedeviled the economy, the state ran deficits, management decentralized, local banks proliferated and immigration to cities soared.

State-Market Interactions in China's Reform Era Junmin Wang, 2014-06-23. China today has the largest communist political regime and one of the most dynamic, fastest growing and largest economies in the world. Using a case study of China's tobacco industry, this book analyses how the Chinese government was able to cultivate big state-owned firms that have successfully embraced the global market. The success of the Chinese economy and the many state-owned firms within it have given rise to a Beijing Consensus challenging almost every principle enshrined in the so-called Washington Consensus that espouses private ownership, free markets and democracy. By examining two important political processes in contemporary China, local state competition and global market building, the book argues that the first process serves as a crucial basis for the second. It illustrates how the local governments involved themselves in building and shaping the tobacco market throughout the 1980s and 1990s and how these domestic market dynamics created conditions for China's recent embrace of the international market. Offering an in-depth exploration of the political economic processes in a key Chinese state industry, the book emphasizes that the key to understanding China's political transition is to look at how the state has been shaped by its market building projects both domestically and globally. It presents an important contribution to studies on Chinese Business and International Political Economy.

China's Authoritarian Path to Development Liang Tang, 2017-06-14. This book examines the various stages of China's development in the economic, social and political fields, relating theories and models of development to what is actually occurring in China and discussing how China's development is likely to progress going forward. It argues that China's modernization hitherto can be characterized as authoritarian development, a fusion of mixed economic institutions of varying types of ownership with social stability and political cohesiveness, and that the present phase where more emphasis is being given to social issues is likely to lead on to a new phase where a more mature civil society and a more extensive middle class are likely to look for greater democratization. It presents an in-depth analysis of China's changing social structure and civil society, explores the forces for and processes of democratization and assesses the prospects for further democratization in the light of changing social structures.

A Political Economy Analysis of China's

Civil Aviation Industry Mark Dougan, 2016-04-29 First published in 2002 This volume is a political economy analysis of China's civil aviation industry with a focus on the reform period beginning in the late 1970s up to the present The chief aim is to identify and analyze the most important political economy variables impacting on the industry's development during this time
