National Civic Review, No. 2 NCR (National Civic Review),2001-09-11 This issue explores the legacy of Election 2000 and its inability to ensure that all duly registered voters can vote and that all their votes can be counted The implications for our future as a democracy continue to drive election reform efforts with Democrats focusing on identifying and removing barriers to voting and Republicans raising concerns over voter fraud Contributors to this issue argue that the outcome of Election 2000 should not be seen as an aberration but as an expression of how our political system currently works and that voting reform is only one topic in the wider debate on political reform in general Topics address include campaign finance reform in light of the McCain Feingold bill as well as a number of developments at the state and local levels ranging from Clean Money Clean Election agreements to partial public financing systems Other areas of the electoral process scrutinized include the role of the Electoral College barriers to third party candidates as personally encountered by Green Party candidate Ralph Nader and equitable access to free airtime in media Innovative political reform at state and local levels is also examined with models provided from New York City s campaign finance system as well as a variety of reform measures around the country Articles include Citizen Democracy Dorothy Ridings Federal Campaign Finance Reform The Long and Winding Road Scott Harshbarger Edwin Davis Localism and Reform The Benefits of Political Diversity Carl Castillo Mike McGrath New York City s Campaign Finance System Why Is the Best Hope for Reform Being Ignored Mark Schmitt Free Airtime Another Means for Cleaning Up Campaigns Matt Farey So You Want to Run for President Ha Barriers to Third Party Entry Ralph Nader Theresa Amato Who Should Elect the President The Case Against the Electoral College Carolyn Jefferson Jenkins Renewed Momentum for Voting System Reform Rob Richie Steven Hill Voting Reforms After Florida Caleb Kleppner What Does It Mean to Be a Good Citizen Charles Bens HEALTHY COMMUNITIES At a Crossroad Gregory Maher National Civic Review, Summer 2000 Jossey-Bass Publishers,NCR Staff,2000-08-01

Accompanying the National Civic League s 105th Conference on Governance entitled New Politics for a New Century this issue is an impassioned argument against the common assumptions of citizen apathy as a reason for decreasing public engagement in the democratic process Instead contributors reveal a sophisticated citizenry with just cause for anger over the obstacles to good government and social change and their growing media fed presumption of bad intent from our political leadership In the face of these daunting factors this issue examines positive trends in rising politics of volunteerism and philanthropy while demonstrating that these are not the sole solution to collectively effecting social change in our country Instead chapters demonstrate methods that the whole tradition of the good government movement can be reengaged to make government more responsive and explore the promise of merging traditional good government movement goals with the active and successful empowerment and poverty movements emerging from communities of color Other topics discussed include outreach to youth media accountability and linking political processes to specific outcomes Even the concept of political reform initially developed as a tool to place barriers against the types of fraud and abuses common in voter participation over a hundred years ago is subject to reform itself With this issue the National Civic League offers a powerful resource for those up to facing the task *The National Civic Federation Review. The Ideology of Civic Engagement Sara Carpenter,2021-01-01 Over the last thirty years calls for the civic engagement of the American citizenry especially young people have gotten increasingly louder A clear message has emerged that today s pressing social problems are best addressed through the innovative and entrepreneurial work of citizens But what are we learning about democracy through our community service and civic engagement The Ideology of Civic Engagement is a unique study of the American volunteerism program AmeriCorps Drawing from deep ethnographic data Sara Carpenter provides careful analysis of the ways in which public policy and federal regulations influence the inner workings of AmeriCorps programs from grant writing to volunteer training with special focus on how teaching and learning for civic engagement takes place within the program Rather than following predetermined metrics for what constitutes democratic participation for young people she examines how young people s political participation is shaped in a nexus of volunteer labor neoliberal transformation of human services deepening forms of inequality and political discourse about democracy

National Civic Review, No. 4, Winter 1999 NCR,Jossey-Bass Publishers,2000-02-01 This issue introduces the key components of the new Civic Index and provides information on how communities can use it to ask the important questions they need to answer in their quest for positive community development NCL President Christopher T Gates demonstrates how the Civic Index is a valuable tool for communities to use to evaluate where they stand within the new realities of citizen democracy and to determine their strengths and weaknesses Contributors outline the three stages of the Civic Index process the initiating stage the stakeholder stage and the implementation stage and discuss how each community can adapt the index to fulfill its specific needs As a tool for self evaluation the Civic Index is a community s first powerful step toward building its capacity to deal with critical issues David A Bloom research associate in the National Civic League s Community Assistance Team also provides a glimpse into a two year study of community change across the United States His article poses questions and presents models that clarify the processes of change and that examine closely the variables influencing and shaping those processes With case studies from the field that include an in depth look at the 1999 All America City Awards and a comprehensive analysis of the four years of hard work and social capital development efforts in Newark New Jersey s Enterprise Community this issue is a practical guidebook and inspirational account on the positive outcomes of community change

Civic Life in America ,2011 This report features national statistics findings and key trends on civic engagement The Civic Life in America research found that the majority of Americans nearly 125 million turned toward problems and helped support their neighbors in times of need It measures how often Americans engage in a variety of activities including political action service social connectedness belonging to a group and connection to information and current events Whether volunteering or helping a neighbor find a job Americans are engaging in activities that help build stronger and more civically involved communities according to the assessment National Civic Review, No. 4, Winter 2005 NCR (National Civic Review),2006-01-05 National Civic Review, No. 1, Spring 2000 NCR (National Civic Review),NCR Staff,Jossey-Bass Publishers,2000-05-01 This issue focuses on the Alliance for National Renewal ANR the ambitious effort launched in 1994 to build a network of representatives from the public private and nonprofit sectors with the goal of creating a national dialogue on community renewal It reflects on the accomplishments and challenges ANR has faced since its inception and demonstrates how ANR successfully created a safe civic space that allows citizens to engage in collaborative problem solving With an introductory essay from esteemed scholar and Common Cause founder John W Gardner articles address the phases of ANR s development including its goal to foster improved relationships across service sectors its role in integrating young people in community based work for social change and its potential in helping nonprofit advocacy groups university administrators and government officials to combine efforts and resources in ways that foster habits of lifelong civic participation in young adults Examples of ANR efforts to connect grassroots organizations are detailed with case studies of successful programs implemented in a community building program in San Antonio Texas a K 12 school reform effort in Washington D C and the Rebuild L A program National Civic Review, No. 1, Spring 2003 Robert Loper,2003-04-01 This issue confirms the National Civic League s continuing dedication to seek out the promising developments at the local level that can help reinvigorate our democracy Articles celebrate the active role that citizens in concert with local government officials and members of the private and nonprofit sectors play in communities across the country Contributors also highlight the potential impact of such local and state level civic engagement can have on national trends in political reform particularly in the highly active area of campaign finance reform Case studies from the field include an analysis of the response to the Los Angeles disturbances a decade later that emphasizes the prominent role that grassroots organizations have had in crafting efforts to make changes there The city manager of Chico California takes a searching look at the public hearing process and makes applicable suggestions for improving its efficacy as a tool for citizen involvement Richard C Harwood founder and president of The Harwood Institute for Public Innovation contributes a thoughtful essay on patriotism and the devotion we all need to bring to the public square as we take up our responsibilities for the common good National Civic Review, No. 3, Fall 1998 NCR (National Civic Review),NCR Staff,Jossey-Bass Publishers,1998-10-01 With real life examples drawn from communities using dynamic innovative approaches to problem solving efforts at the local level this issue highlights successful programs of regional social changes which can become profound regenerative agents of increasing citizen involvement at the national level Lessons learned in systems change and government reform in Indianapolis Indiana and Charlotte North Carolina also demonstrate that although there is no one set path for systems reform a community's development becomes linked to the changes that occurred before and contributes in some way to additional reforms in the future. The issue offers additional examples of communities leading the way in such areas as strategic planning, community development systems, change racial understanding and political reform. Contributors also detail the five principles and practices that communities have used to recreate a successful citizen based approach to politics. In a special focus section on Civic Infrastructure, Allan Wallis, Jarle P. Crocker and Bill Schechter explore the perspectives of academics, public advocates, philanthropists and community development practitioners on the uses of social capital. This article is Part One in a two part series that concludes in NCR Volume 87 Number 4.

Civic Hopes and Political Realities S. Karthick Ramakrishnan, Irene Bloemraad, 2011-02

For many Americans participation in community organizations lays the groundwork for future political engagement. But how does this traditional model of civic life relate to the experiences of today's immigrants? Do community organizations help immigrants gain political influence in their neighborhoods and cities? In Civic Hopes and Political Realities, experts from a wide range of disciplines explore the way civic groups across the country and around the world are shaping immigrants' quest for political effectiveness. Civic Hopes and Political Realities shows that while immigrant organizations play an important role in the lives of members, their impact is often compromised by political marginalization and a severe lack of resources. S. Karthick Ramakrishnan and Irene Bloemraad examine community organizations in six cities in California and find that even in areas with high rates of immigrant organizing, policymakers remain unaware of local ethnic organizations. Looking at new immigrant destinations, Kristi Andersen finds that community organizations often serve as the primary vehicle for political incorporation, a role once played by the major political parties. Floris Vermeulen and Maria Berger show how policies in two European cities lead to very different outcomes for ethnic organizations. Amsterdam's more welcoming multicultural policies help immigrant community groups attain a level of political clout that similar organizations in Berlin lack. Janelle Wong, Kathy Rim and Haven Perez report on a study of Latino and Asian American evangelical churches. While the church shapes members' political views on issues such as abortion and same sex marriage, church members may also question the evangelical movement's position on such issues as civil rights and immigration. Els de Graauw finds that many non profit organizations without explicitly political agendas nonetheless play a crucial role in advancing the political interests of their immigrant members. Recent cuts in funding for such organizations, she argues, block not only the provision of key social services but also an important avenue for political voice. Looking at community organizing in a suburban community, Sofya Aptekar finds that even when immigrant organizations have considerable resources and highly educated members, they tend to be excluded from town politics. Some observers worry that America's increasing diversity is detrimental to civic life and political engagement. Civic Hopes and Political Realities boldly advances an alternative understanding of the ways in which immigrants are enriching America's civic and political realms even in the face of often challenging circumstances.
