IN THE AGE OF DINOSAURS

During the Mesozoic Era, North America was a land of dinosaurs. From the long-necked sauropods to the fierce T-Rex, the continent was teeming with life. This map shows the distribution of these prehistoric creatures across the continent.

A major event in the history of North America was the Cretaceous-Tertiary (C-T) boundary, which marked the end of the Cretaceous period and the beginning of the Tertiary period. This boundary is marked by a thin layer of clay that contains a high concentration of iridium, a rare element on Earth. The C-T boundary is located in the state of New Mexico, near the town of Grants.
