interpretation of American foreign policy Here he challenges the two dominant and rival interpretations of the relationship between state and society interest group liberalism and Marxism He contends that the state is an autonomous entity acting on behalf of the national interest and that state behavior cannot be explained by group or class interest On the basis of fifteen case studies drawn from extensive public records and published literature on American raw materials policy in the twentieth century Professor Krasner provides empirical substance to the debate about the meaning of the national interest the importance of bureaucratic politics and the influence of business on American foreign policy International

Nuechterlein,2021-09-15 Although the term national interest has long been used in reference to the foreign policy goals of nations there has been no generally agreed upon definition of the concept as a result Donald E Nuechterlein contends there has been a tendency for foreign policy to be determined by institutional prejudice and past policy rather than by a systematic assessment of national interests By what criterion does a President decide that a given interest is or is not vital that is whether he must contemplate defending it by force if other measures fail In this study Nuechterlein offers a new conceptual framework for the analysis of foreign policy decisions resting on more precise definitions and distinguishing among the degrees of interest that the United States perceives in the range of foreign policy issues it faces He also deals with the constitutional problem of checks and balances between the Presidency and Congress in setting the goals of foreign policy and the influence of private interest groups and the media on the definition of national interest Underlining the need for constant reassessment of priorities in a rapidly changing international environment Nuechterlein illustrates his analysis by drawing on the American experience in foreign affairs since World War II A case study of the American involvement in Southeast Asia describes how six presidents beginning with Franklin Roosevelt viewed United States interests there and the conclusions each drew in terms of policy tools to defend those interests in Vietnam Finally he assesses what the future vital interests of the United States are likely to be in light of the shifting balance of world power and the growing importance of international economics West European Pacifism and the Strategy for Peace Peter Van Den Dungen,1985-06-18 Foreign

National Interests in International Society

Martha Finnemore, 1996 How do states know what they want Asking how interests are defined and how changes in them are accommodated Martha Finnemore shows the fruitfulness of a constructivist approach to international politics She draws on insights from sociological institutionalism to develop a systemic approach to state interests and state behavior by investigating an international structure not of power but of meaning and social value An understanding of what states want she argues requires insight into the international social structure of which they are a part States are embedded in dense networks of transnational and international social relations that shape their perceptions and their preferences in consistent ways Finnemore focuses on international organizations as one important component of social structure and investigates the ways in which they redefine state preferences She details three examples in different issue areas In state structure she discusses UNESCO and the changing international organization of science In security she analyzes the role of the Red Cross and the acceptance of the Geneva Convention rules of war Finally she focuses on the World Bank and explores the changing definitions of development in the Third World Each case shows how international organizations socialize states to accept new political goals and new social values in ways that have lasting impact on the conduct of war the workings of the international political economy and the structure of states themselves

Constructing National Interests Jutta Weldes, 1996

Shocking the Conscience of Humanity Margaret M. deGuzman, 2020-04-13 The most commonly cited justification for international criminal law is that it addresses crimes of such gravity that they shock the conscience of humanity From decisions about how to define crimes and when to exercise jurisdiction to limitations on defences and sentencing determinations gravity rhetoric permeates the discourse of international criminal law Yet the concept of gravity has thus far remained highly undertheorized This book uncovers the consequences for the regime's legitimacy of its heavy reliance on the poorly understood idea of gravity Margaret M deGuzman argues that gravity's ambiguity may at times enable a thin consensus to emerge around decisions such as the creation of an institution or the definition of a crime but that increasingly it undermines efforts to build a strong and resilient global justice community The book suggests ways to reconceptualize gravity in line with global values and goals to better support the long term legitimacy of international criminal law
