Taking on Water Wendy J. Pabich, 2012-09-18 When Wendy Pabich received a monthly water bill for 30 000 gallons for a household of two people and one dog she was chagrined. After all she is an expert on sustainable water use. So she set out to make a change. Taking on Water is the story of the author's personal quest to extract and implement from a dizzying soup of data and analysis day to day solutions to reduce water use in her life. She sets out to examine the water footprint of the products she consumes, process her own wastewater, onsite revamp the water and energy systems in her home and make appropriate choices in order to swim the swim. Part memoir, part investigation, part solution manual, the book is filled with ruminations on philosophy, science, facts, figures and personal behavioral insights, metrics both serious and humorous to track progress and guidelines for the general public for making small or perhaps monumental but important changes in their own lives. Told with humor and grace, Taking on Water offers a raw account of how deep we need to dig to change our wasteful ways. Crash Course Renal and Urinary System

One-dimensional Analyses, Shock Wave Propagation from Underwater Cratering Detonations Charles M. Snell, 1975 Research has recently been conducted on the use of large buried chemical explosive charges for engineering excavation Investigations in this area were initially concerned with crater formation in relatively homogeneous rock media a process which is now well understood However it has become apparent that the greatest cost and operational advantages may be realized by applying the technique to rock excavation in an underwater environment Cratering dynamics in an underwater two layer configuration have not been well understood Small scale modeling tests and large scale excavation projects have revealed two new factors which significantly influence underwater cratering processes 1 early time dynamic effects caused by the presence of the rock water interface and water layer and 2 very late time water washback and slope failure effects in the crater vicinity The report addresses the first of these two effects by means of hydrodynamic computer calculations
