MacDorman, 2009. When explaining cognition, one must explain how representations in the mind or symbols become meaningful by connecting to the external world. This process of connecting symbols with sensorimotor experiences is known as symbol grounding. The classical view of symbol grounding is that it is an individual process: a person or machine interacts with the environment and associates symbols with external experiences. This volume contains views from different disciplines ranging from psychology to robotics on how this view can be extended by first extending symbol grounding to encompass semiotics and by showing how the classical view exaggerates the importance of written language. Grounding does not necessarily involve written notations but rather language is an external cognitive resource that allows us to acquire categories and concepts. Secondly, as symbol grounding relies on language to acquire and coordinate the process, and language is a dynamical process rooted in both culture and biology, symbol grounding by extension is also sensitive to culture, emotion, and embodiment. The contributions to this volume were previously published in Interaction Studies 8.1, 2007.

distinctive in giving an historical and interdisciplinary perspective on the rule based and experience based debate and in supporting an integrated account In the study reported here variation was found to be due to differences in syntactic competence and the author argues that sentence comprehension is a learned skill displaying many of the general characteristics of cognitive skills The book will be stimulating reading for psycholinguists theoretical linguists applied linguists and educators
