

National Strategies

Australia began addressing the enhanced greenhouse effect & its consequences in a formal way through the National Greenhouse Response Strategy, which was sanctioned in 1992. Key elements of the strategy were to limit greenhouse gas emissions, conserve and enhance greenhouse gas sinks, improve knowledge and understanding of the greenhouse effect and prepare for the potential impact of climate change. To achieve this, priority areas were identified, including:

- Preparation of a National Greenhouse Gas Inventory (NGGI) of emissions and sinks.
- Development of mechanisms that involve the community in strategy involvement and implementation.
- Establishment of a National Greenhouse Advisory panel.
- Development of a variety of strategies which encourage effective use of energy.
- Continued research into energy-efficiency programs.

National Greenhouse Response Strategy December 1992:

Greenhouse: Coping with Climate Change WJ Bouma, GI Pearman, MR Manning, 1996-01-01 Consideration of climate change deals increasingly with impacts and responses and therefore involves a wide range of technical issues and a diverse community of experts One of the challenges faced is that of ensuring effective communication between these different areas of expertise For example climate change studies require new types of collaboration between carbon cycle modellers and economists and between meteorologists and coastal geomorphologists Furthermore there is a need to distil balanced assessments ranging across many disciplines for the benefit of all policymakers Greenhouse Coping with Climate Change brings together the contributions of many experts to the climate change debate This book is a landmark publication summarising our understanding of climate change issues as they affect Oceania It contains review papers that report on the status of knowledge methodologies and developments and a selection of focused papers that expand on specific issues and present significant new developments of wide general interest and relevance to the region Yearbook Australia ,

Timescales and Environmental Change Graham Chapman, Thackwray Driver, 2002-11 Leading experts from a diverse range of disciplines encourage the reader from whatever perspective to think about change and environmental issues in a new light through different time scales Running from the Storm Clive Hamilton, 2001 This text provides an account of the key issues that affect climate change policy in Australia detailing the policy failures the murky politics the corruption of the policy process the influence of the fossil fuel industries on policy makers and the ethical issues that underpin the debate

Security, the Environment and Emancipation Matt McDonald, 2012-01-30 This book offers an examination of the role of emancipation in the study and practice of security focusing on the issue of environmental change The end of the Cold War created a context in which traditional approaches to security could be systematically questioned This period also saw a concerted attempt in IR to argue that environmental change constituted a threat to security This book argues that such a notion is problematic as it suggests that a universal definition of security is possible which prevents a recognition of security as a site of contestation in which a range of actors articulate alternative visions of who or what is in need of being secured If security is understood and approached in traditional terms as the territorial preservation of the nation state from external threat then it is indeed difficult to see how environmental issues would benefit from being placed on states security agenda If however security is defined in terms of the emancipation of the most vulnerable individuals from contingent structural oppressions then drawing a relationship between environmental change and security may be beneficial for redressing those environmental issues and prioritising the needs of those most at risk from the manifestations of global environmental change This book takes the limitations of contemporary approaches to the relationship between the environment and security as its starting point and seeks to do two things First it aims to illustrate the ways in which arguments over approaches to environmental issues can be viewed as contestation over the meaning of security in particular political contexts Central here is the composition and assumptions of the dominant security discourse to emerge regarding those issues a framework of meaning for the most important forms of action on behalf of a particular group defining the terms for meaningful contestation and negotiation about security itself within that group As such the book attempts to illustrate the dynamics of competition over the meaning of security with reference to environmental issues particularly focusing on instances of political change in the dominant security discourse through which that issue is approached In the process the author points to the central role of these dominant security discourses in underpinning the most practically significant actions regarding environmental issues such as deforestation and global climate change The book employs methodological tools that enable a focus on how particular frameworks of meaning are constituted and become dominant how they provide a lens through which various issues are approached and how discourses most consistent with redressing environmental change and the suffering of the most vulnerable might come to provide the framework through which security is viewed in particular contexts This book will be of much interest to students of Critical Security Studies geography sociology IR and Political Science in general

Ecology, Uncertainty and Policy John Handmer, 2017-09-29 A broad and comprehensive exploration of the role of the ecological sciences in sustainability for undergraduates The urgent quest for more sustainable patterns of development has placed new and difficult demands on both scientists and policy makers as they seek to establish more informed and effective policy processes and management regimes in the face of pervasive uncertainty Written by an international group of authors from a range of disciplines ecology geography law policy analysis and others the chapters explore issues of scientific legitimacy public participation non governmental organisations inter sectoral communication and pragmatic public policy across a wide range of ecosystem management contexts Implementing Sustainable Development William M. Lafferty, James Meadowcroft, 2000-11-30 At the Rio Earth Summit in 1992 political leaders from more than a hundred countries made a formal commitment to intensify efforts to resolve global environment and development problems and to strive for sustainable development This volume examines how governments in the developed industrial world have responded to the challenge of sustainable development since it was catapulted into the international stage It focuses on the central government engagement with sustainable development in Australia Canada Japan Norway the Netherlands Sweden the United Kingdom the United States and the European Union The study shows that sustainable development has been integrated into governmental idiom in most jurisdictions and has come to be associated with a series of changes to the structures and approaches deployed to manage environmental problems Yet it also reveals significant differences of interpretation and priority and in enthusiasm with which sustainable development has been received Climate Change in the South Pacific: Impacts and Responses in Australia, New Zealand, and Small Island States Alexander Gillespie, William C.G. Burns, 2006-04-11 ALEXANDER GILLESPIE WILLIAM C G BURNS The idea for this book grew out of the Ecopolitics conference in Canberra Australia in 1996 The conference captured the ferment of the climate change debate in the South Pacific as well as some its potential implications for the region's inhabitants and ecosystems. At that conference one of the editors Gillespie delivered a paper on climate change issues in the region as did Ros Taplin and Mark Diesendorf who are also contributors to this volume. This book focuses on climate change issues in Australia, New Zealand and the small island nations in the Pacific as the world struggles to cope with possible the impacts of environmental change and to formulate effective responses. While Australia and New Zealand's per capita emissions of greenhouse gases are among the highest in the world their aggregate contributions are small. However both nations may exert a disproportionate influence in the global greenhouse debate because their obstinate positions at recent conferences of the parties to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (FCCC) may provide justification for other developed nations as well as developing countries to refuse to make meaningful reductions in their greenhouse gas emissions.

Environmental Politics and Institutional Change Elim Papadakis, 1996-11-18 An examination of the responsiveness of Australian political institutions to environmental concerns. Markets, the State, and the Environment Robyn Eckersley, 1995 A reference book consisting mainly of revised versions of selected papers presented at a workshop on Bureaucracy, Markets and the Environment held in October 1992 at Monash University. Critically examines the range of tools for environmental protection available to governments. Provides a set of principles and recommendations to guide environmental policy makers and various contributors assess the various instruments for environmental protection against a range of criteria. Considers developments in environmental management in Europe, US and Australia. Includes an index. The author has also written Environmentalism and Political Theory. OECD Environmental Performance Reviews: Australia 1998 OECD, 1998-03-27 This report evaluates Australia's progress in reducing the pollution burden, improving natural resource management, integrating environmental and economic policies and strengthening international co-operation.

Australian Climate Policy and Diplomacy Ben L. Parr, 2019-12-11 Australian Climate Policy and Diplomacy provides a well overdue critique of existing and high profile publications that convey the greenhouse mafia hypothesis which posits that Australia's weak policy response to climate change is the result of a menacing domestic fossil fuel lobby. Ben L. Parr argues that the shared government industry discourse about protecting Australia's industrial competitiveness has had a more decisive influence in shaping and legitimising Australian climate policy than the direct lobbying tactics of the fossil fuel industry. Parr also reveals how the divergent foreign policy discourses and traditions of Australia's two major political parties as internationalist versus alliance focused have enabled and constrained their climate diplomacy and domestic policies over time. To demonstrate his argument he presents a discourse analysis woven into a chronological policy narrative comprising more than 1000 primary texts, media releases, interviews and speeches generated by prime ministers and key fossil fuel lobbyists. Overall this volume illustrates how domestic forces have and are influencing Australia's climate policy. In doing so it also provides a framework that can be adapted to examine climate mitigation policies in other countries notably Canada and the US. This book will be of interest to

,1994 Getting to Grips with Green Plans Barry Dalal Clayton,2013-12-19 One of the more significant recommendations to emerge from UNCED in 1992 was the call in Agenda 21 for countries to develop and implement national sustainable development strategies Most countries have responded to this challenge However many countries also have a long history of drawing up planning exercises at this level to deal with environmental problems Green planning is now used as a shorthand term for a range of such national level planning initiatives covering both sustainable development and environmental concerns and countries from the North and the South can benefit from a pooling of knowledge Getting to Grips with Greens Plans presents a cogent analysis of industrial countries experiences in this area drawing out lessons and observations from broad empirical experience Part 1 provides an overview of national green planning reviewing its origins and scope identifying popular approaches and common processes highlighting important issues such as participation the influence of domestic politics and the track record of more ambitious regional plans and comparing approaches in developed and developing countries Part 2 goes on to present a series of detailed case studies drawn largely from interviews with key individuals responsible for coordinating national green planning processes These cases come from a range of Western and Eastern European countries the US and Canada and Australia and New Zealand Some of these case studies show impressive records of achievement whilst others demonstrate potential stumbling blocks All demonstrate the difficulty of putting the concept of sustainable development into practice Barry Dalal Clayton is director of the Environmental Planning Group at the International Institute for Environment and Development London In recent years Dr Dalal Clayton has been deeply involved in analyzing approaches to national sustainable development strategies and environmental action plans in many countries and in advising governments and international agencies in this field His other current research interests include environmental impact assessment community based wildlife management and land use planning Originally published in 1996

Climate Change: Significance for Agriculture and Forestry David H. White, S. Mark Howden, 2013-06-29 Societies throughout the world depend on food fiber and forest products Continuity and security of agricultural and forest production are therefore of paramount importance Predicted changes in climate could be expected to alter perhaps significantly the levels and relative agricultural and forestry production of different nations over the next few decades Agriculture and forestry are also likely to influence the rate and magnitude of such change as they can be both significant sources and sinks of a number of greenhouse gases Adaptive management strategies therefore need to be formulated and implemented for these sectors to enable them to both adapt to future environmental change and to limit greenhouse gas emissions This book arose from an international workshop held in Canberra Australia under the auspices of the former IPCC Working Group III Agriculture Forestry and Other Human Activities Sub Group AFOS A number of leading speakers at the workshop were approached to encapsulate the concepts discussed and developed at this workshop The resulting papers make up this volume The book promotes a greater understanding of the major sources and sinks of greenhouse gases within intensive and extensive cropping and animal production systems and of agroforestry It highlights the need to adopt a holistic systems approach to monitoring and reducing greenhouse gas emissions and assessing impacts and to integrate climate change related goals and activities with other issues such as biodiversity desertification and sustainable agriculture and forestry
