Excavating the Medieval Image David S. Areford, 2017-11-30

Medieval images especially manuscript illuminations have long been treated independently of the contexts in which they were created These beautiful miniature paintings frequently valued as keepers of documentary evidence or as curious artistic commodities have only recently become the focus of art historians concerned with new questions related to artistic working methods audience and the status of the visual in the Middle Ages and the modern era Excavating the Medieval Image argues that the illuminated image is best understood as thoroughly integrated in the material context of the manuscript and thus integrated in a cultural context of production and reception Seen in this way the illuminated manuscript becomes a kind of archaeological site which must be carefully unearthed layer by layer The fourteen essays gathered here are written by scholars of both medieval and Renaissance art history and demonstrate varied methodological approaches that combine the pursuits of traditional connoisseurship and iconography with those of critical theory and historiography In addition the authors contribute more broadly to important interdisciplinary issues such as the study of gender text and image and the history of literacy and the book

Piety in Pieces Kathryn M. Rudy, 2016-09-26

Medieval manuscripts resisted obsolescence Made by highly specialised craftspeople scribes illuminators book binders with labour intensive processes using exclusive and sometimes exotic materials parchment made from dozens or hundreds of skins

inks and paints made from prized minerals animals and plants books were expensive and built to last They usually outlived their owners Rather than discard them when they were superseded book owners found ways to update amend and upcycle books or book parts These activities accelerated in the fifteenth century Most manuscripts made before 1390 were bespoke and made for a particular client but those made after 1390 especially books of hours were increasingly made for an open market in which the producer was not in direct contact with the buyer Increased efficiency led to more generic products which owners were motivated to personalise It also led to more blank parchment in the book for example the backs of inserted miniatures and the blank ends of textual components Book buyers of the late fourteenth and throughout the fifteenth century still held onto the old connotations of manuscripts that they were custom made luxury items even when the production had become impersonal Owners consequently purchased books made for an open market and then personalised them filling in the blank spaces and even adding more components later This would give them an affordable product but one that still smacked of luxury and met their individual needs They kept older books in circulation by amending them attached items to generic books to make them more relevant and valuable and added new prayers with escalating indulgences as the culture of salvation shifted Rudy considers ways in which book owners adjusted the contents of their books from the simplest add a marginal note sew in a curtain to the most complex take the book apart embellish the components with painted decoration add more quires of parchment By making sometimes extreme adjustments book owners kept their books fashionable and emotionally relevant This study explores the intersection of codicology and human desire Rudy shows how increased modularisation of book making led to more standardisation but also to more opportunities for personalisation She asks What properties did parchment manuscripts have that printed books lacked What are the interrelationships among technology efficiency skill loss and standardisation

Printing the Middle Ages Sian Echard, 2013-09-25 In Printing the Middle Ages Sian Echard looks to the postmedieval postmanuscript lives of medieval texts seeking to understand the lasting impact on both the popular and the scholarly imaginations of the physical objects that transmitted the Middle Ages to the English speaking world Beneath and behind the foundational works of recovery that established the canon of medieval literature she argues was a vast terrain of books scholarly or popular grubby or beautiful widely disseminated or privately printed By turning to these we are able to chart the differing reception histories of the literary texts of the British Middle Ages For Echard any reading of a medieval text whether past or present amateur or academic floats on the surface of a complex sea of expectations and desires made up of the books that mediate those readings Each chapter of Printing the Middle Ages focuses on a central textual object and tells its story in order to reveal the history of its reception and transmission Moving from the first age of print into the early twenty first century Echard examines the special fonts created in the Elizabethan period to reproduce Old English the hand drawn facsimiles of the nineteenth century and today's experiments with the digital reproduction of medieval objects she explores the illustrations in eighteenth century versions of

Guy of Warwick and Bevis of Hampton she discusses nineteenth century children s versions of the Canterbury Tales and the aristocratic transmission history of John Gower s Confessio Amantis and she touches on fine press printings of Dante Froissart and Langland Dante's New Life of the Book Martin Eisner, 2021 Dante s New Life of the Book examines Dante s Vita nuova through its transformations in manuscripts printed books translations and adaptations Eisner investigates how these different material manifestations participate in the work drawing attention to its distinctive elements
