Mistress Of The House Great Ladies And Grand Houses 1670 183:

Consumption and the Country House Jon Stobart, Mark Rothery, 2016 This study explores the consumption practices of the landed aristocracy of Georgian England Focussing on three families and drawing on detailed analysis of account books receipted bills household inventories diaries and correspondence Consumption and the Country House charts the spending patterns of this elite group during the so called consumer revolution of the eighteenth century Generally examined through the lens of middling families homes and motivations this book explores the ways in which the aristocracy were engaged in this wider transformation of English society Analysis centres on the goods that the aristocracy purchased both luxurious and mundane the extent to which they pursued fashionable modes and goods the role that family and friends played in shaping notions of taste the influence of gender on taste and refinement the geographical reach of provisioning and the networks that lay behind this consumer activity and the way this all contributed to the construction of the country house The country house thus emerges as much more than a repository of luxury and splendour it lay at the heart of complex networks of exchange sociability demand and supply Exploring these processes and relationships serves to reanimate the country house making it an active site of consumption rather than simply an expression of power and taste and drawing it into the mainstream of consumption histories At the same time the landed aristocracy are shown to be rounded consumers driven by values of thrift and restraint as much as extravagant desires and valuing the old as well as the new not least as markers of their pedigree and heritance

Prolific Ground Nicolle Jordan, 2025 Prolific Ground investigates landownership as a crucial factor in the emergence of British women's independence during the long eighteenth century Staking a claim to the nation's investment in land women writers acquired a socio political authority that otherwise eluded them The landscapes that emerge in their writing testify to the socio political power of land in this era New Books on Women and Feminism, 2004
