

What are the benefits of presidential assessment?

When conducted in a positive spirit, presidential assessment:

- Honors a fundamental board responsibility for evaluating board performance;
- Reinforces the leadership partnership of the board chair and president;
- Supports “raising the bar” for already able leaders who can still do better;
- Highlights warning signs and provides opportunities for course corrections;
- Deepens trustees’ understanding of the complexities of higher education leadership;
- Identifies future challenges and opportunities for the president and board to consider; and
- Contributes to board deliberations on contract renewals, extensions, and compensation.

What are the differences between Annual Assessments and Comprehensive 360 Assessments?

Annual Assessments:

- Occur annually and are conducted in about 30 days;
- Rely on the president’s self-assessment and the board’s impressions as the primary sources of evidence;
- Receive limited input from stakeholders beyond the president and the board; and
- Involve no external assessor.

Comprehensive 360 Assessments:

- Occur every two to five years and are conducted over several months;
- In addition to the president’s self-assessment, it seeks appraisals of performance from 20–60 stakeholders and external observers;
- Are guided by an experienced assessor, usually a current or former chief executive; and
- Conclude with major expectations of the president for the future.

What is the sequence of Annual Assessments?

- 1. Develop board policies on annual assessment.
This written policy maps out the annual review process to include its purposes, timing, the role of the chair and an assessment committee, and the criteria for evaluation.
- 2. Select and orient the assessment committee.
An assessment committee that devotes ample time to the presidential assessment process is ideal. This committee offers advice to the chair, becomes better acquainted with the work and performance of the president, and communicates often with the board as a whole.

Presidential Transition in Higher Education James Martin, James E. Samels, 2006-01-04 Zimpher University of Wisconsin Milwaukee

Presidential Powers Harold J Krent, 2005-02-01 Framed in Article II of the Constitution presidential powers are dictated today by judicial as well as historical precedent To understand the ways the president wields power as well as how this power is kept in check by other branches of government Harold J Krent presents three overlapping determinants of the president's role under the Constitution the need for presidential initiative in administering the law and providing foreign policy leadership the importance of maintaining congressional control over policymaking and the imperative to ensure that the president be accountable to the public Krent's examination is sweeping ranging from the president's ability to appoint and remove executive branch officials to the president's role in proposing and implementing treaties and the power to conduct war to the extent the president can refuse to turn over information in response to congressional and judicial requests Finally Krent addresses the history and purposes of presidential pardons By drawing on historic and contemporary presidential actions to illustrate his points Krent reminds us that the president is both an exalted leader with the regalia of power and an American who is and should be accountable to fellow citizens important considerations as we elect and assess our presidents

Presidential Campaigns and Presidential Accountability Michele P. Claibourn, 2011-02-01 In investigating the presidential campaigns and early administrations of Barack Obama George W Bush and Bill Clinton Presidential Campaigns and Presidential Accountability shows how campaign promises are realized in government once the victor is established in the Oval Office To measure correlations between presidential campaigns and policy making Michele P Claibourn closely examines detailed campaign advertising information survey data about citizen's responses to campaigns processes that create expectations among constituents and media attention and response to candidates Disputing the notion that presidents ignore campaign issues upon being elected Presidential Campaigns and Presidential Accountability contends that candidates raise issues that matter and develop ideas to address these issues based on voter reactions Conventional disappointment in presidential campaigns stems from a misunderstanding of the role that presidents play in a system of separate institutions sharing power and Claibourn forces us to think about presidential campaigns in the context of the presidency what the president realistically can and cannot do Based on comparisons of the Clinton Bush and Obama campaigns and the first years of the subsequent presidential administrations Claibourn builds a generalized theory of agenda accountability showing how presidential action is constrained by campaign agendas
