Tucker,      The Relación de Michoacán (1539-1541) and the Politics of Representation in Colonial Mexico Angélica Jimena Afanador-Pujol,2015-07-01

Through close readings of the painted images in a major sixteenth century illustrated manuscript this book demonstrates the critical role that images played in ethnic identity formation and politics in colonial Mexico The Relación de Michoacán 1539 1541 is one of the earliest surviving illustrated manuscripts from colonial Mexico Commissioned by the Spanish viceroy Antonio de Mendoza the Relación was produced by a Franciscan friar together with indigenous noble informants and anonymous native artists who created its forty four illustrations To this day the Relación remains the primary source for studying the pre Columbian practices and history of the people known as Tarascans or Purhépecha However much remains to be said about how the Relación's colonial setting shaped its final form By looking at the Relación in its colonial context this study reveals how it presented the indigenous collaborators a unique opportunity to shape European perceptions of them while settling conflicting agendas outshining competing ethnic groups and carving a place for themselves in the new colonial society Through archival research and careful visual analysis Angélica Afanador Pujol provides a new and fascinating account that situates the manuscript's images within the colonial conflicts that engulfed the indigenous collaborators These conflicts ranged from disputes over political posts among indigenous factions to labor and land disputes against Spanish newcomers Afanador Pujol explores how these tensions are physically expressed in the manuscript's production and in its many contradictions between text and images as well as in numerous emendations to the images By studying representations of justice landscape conquest narratives and genealogy within the Relación Afanador Pujol clearly demonstrates the visual construction of identity its malleability and its political possibilities

No detailed description available for Men and Cultures      The Eighth Day Richard Newbold Adams, 2014-02-04 Can human social evolution be described in terms common to other sciences most specifically as an energy process The Eighth Day reflects a conviction that the human trajectory for all its uniqueness and indeterminism will never be satisfactorily understood until it is framed in dynamics that are common to all of nature The problem in doing this however lies in ourselves The major social theories have failed to treat human social evolution as a component of broader natural processes The Eighth Day argues that the energy process provides a basis for explaining comparing and measuring complex social evolution Using traditional ecological energy flow studies as background society is conceived as a self organization of energy This perspective enables Adams to analyze society in term of the natural selection of self organizing energy forms and the trigger processes basic to it Domestication civilization socioeconomic development and the regulation of contemporary industrial nation states serve to illustrate the approach A principal aim is to explore the limitation that energy process imposes on human social evolution as well as to clarify the alternatives that it allows Richly informed by contemporary anthropological historicism sociobiology and Marxism The Eighth Day avoids simple reductionism and denies facile ideological categorization Adams builds on work in nonequilibrium thermodynamics and theoretical biology and brings three decades of his own work to an analysis of human society that demands an extreme materialism in which human thought and action find a central place      The Cambridge History of the Native Peoples of the Americas Bruce G.
