Understanding the Intersections of Race, Gender, and Gifted

Education Nicole M. Joseph, 2020-06-01 This book seeks to understand the complexities of talented and high performing Black girls and women in STEM across the P 20 trajectory Analogously this volume aims to understand the intersections between giftedness its identification and racial gender and academic discipline identities The dearth of literature on this subject suggests that Black girls and women have unique experiences in gifted programming in large part because of factors associated with gifted programs in general Key factors affecting Black students and Black girls in particular are identification and underrepresentation These factors can be shaped by interlocking systems of racism classism gender bias and other forms of oppression Teachers in the P 12 educational system are the first identifiers for gifted programming and look for student characteristics such as natural leadership inquisitiveness and students desire to be in gifted programs Because many Black girls are stereotyped and teachers rarely have deep understanding of cultural differences Black girls are less likely to be identified for gifted programming More specifically Black girls lack of representation in gifted mathematics or STEM programs contradicts research that finds that girls reach several developmental advantages ahead of boys For example research has shown that girls talk and read earlier receive higher grades in elementary school and drop out less often than boys Other studies have also shown that Black girls have higher mathematics career aspirations than their White and Latina female peers yet they are rarely represented in gifted math and Advanced Placement AP math programs Furthermore the underrepresentation of urban low income African American students in gifted education is related to low test scores student and family choice a lack of teacher referral and a mismatch between home and school cultures Some high performing Black girls and women are participating in programs that nurture and support their racial and gender identities and contribute to them developing into strong and efficacious girls and women who have agency in their lives This anthology includes studies that illustrate the complexities of intersectionality in various STEM programs while also demonstrating that increasing access to STEM for Black girls and women is doable Critical Pedagogy and Teacher Education in the Neoliberal Era Susan L.

Groenke, J. Amos Hatch, 2009-07-30 Susan L Groenke and J Amos Hatch It does not feel safe to be critical in university based teacher education programs right now especially if you are junior faculty In the neoliberal era critical teacher education research gets less and less funding and professors can be denied tenure or lose their jobs for speaking out against the status quo Also we know that the pedagogies critical teacher educators espouse can get beginning K 12 teachers fired or shuffled around especially if their students test scores are low This paired with the resistance many of the future teachers who come through our programs predominantly White middle class and happy with the current state of affairs show toward critical pedagogy makes it seem a whole lot easier less risky even smart not to do critical pedagogy at all Why bother We believe this book shows we have lots of reasons to bother with critical pedagogy in teacher education as current educational policies and the neoliberal discourses that vie for the identities of our own local contexts increasingly do not have education for the public good in mind This book shows teacher educators taking risks seeking out what political theorist James Scott has called the small openings for resistance in the contexts that mark teacher education in the early twenty first century Poverty and Welfare in America David Wagner,2019-09-12
