intelligence completely failed to understand how Fighter Command was organised and controlled nor that it was replacement pilots not aircraft that was Air Chief Marshal Dowding's greatest concern. Indeed on 15 September 1940 Luftwaffe aircrews were briefed to expect but a token resistance over London from the last handful of RAF fighters; their morale shattered when their first attack was met by over 300 the second by nearly as many. This convinced Hitler that the Luftwaffe could not achieve the aerial superiority needed for the invasion of Britain to proceed. Two days later Operation Seelöwe was postponed indefinitely. Reichsmarschall Hermann Göring however still believed that the Luftwaffe could prevail and so continued attacking the UK changing tack yet again. As London had proved it could take it the Luftwaffe whilst continuing to bomb the capital by night now focussed its daylight attacks on the British aircraft industry. Naturally the Supermarine Spitfire factory at Southampton was a primary target; it was subsequently badly hit with great loss of life. Other factories in the West Country were also targeted and owing to a navigation error due to cloud cover the picturesque town of Sherborne was devastated on 30 September 1940. By that date however it was clear that Göring's He 111 force was unable to continue absorbing such losses and the type was exclusively switched to night bombing thereby substantially reducing the German daylight bombing force. On 20 September 1940 Me 109 fighter bombers attacked London and going forward the next and final phase would see such attacks and high flying fighter sweeps dominate the daytime arena. Such raids though were never going to defeat Britain so it is fair to say that the period reviewed in this volume really did see the Daylight defeat of the Luftwaffe over England in 1940 and the events involved are interpreted and recounted in great detail.

Defending London Mike Osborne, 2011-11-30 For two thousand years London has been at the heart of Britain's development as a nation providing a focus for its political life. The military element is now usually visible only through the pageantry which attends royal occasions but this masks a more serious underlying intent. Frequently the target for both foreign invaders and domestic factions it has been required to defend itself against everything from seaborne raiders to aerial bombardment and the threat of nuclear war. At the same time the direction of military affairs has been centred on London along with the military infrastructure of barracks, depots, magazines, dockyards and munitions factories. The evidence for much of this can be seen in the landscape from the mediaeval Tower of London and the underground nuclear citadels in the urban centre to the royal palaces, moated sites, airfields and anti invasion defences in the suburbs and the green belt. This book describes the various elements of London's military heritage and places them in their historical and social context. From the castles and strong houses of the mediaeval and Tudor monarchs and statesmen to the pseudo fortresses of the Victorian militia and rifle volunteers, the airfields of the anti Zeppelin fighters of the Royal Flying Corps and the Battle of Britain, bases of the RAF to the pillboxes of the defences against invasion in 1940 and the anti nuclear defences of the Cold War and beyond.
