Deb Adamson, 2019-12-04 Florence Griswold The Keeper of the Artists by Deb Adamson illustrated by Anne Zimanski is a wonderful book It tells the true story of Miss Florence Griswold who is credited with making American art history by establishing the Lyme Art Colony the epicenter of U S Impressionism which still exists today nearly 100 years later Florence called herself The Keeper of the Artists and through the late 1800s and early 1900s played hostess to some of the most famous artists in American history It was artist Henry Ward Ranger who initially established Griswold House as a Barbizon art colony but then years later with the arrival of Childe Hassam it was transformed into one of the largest and most famous American homes of Impressionism The artists never really minded the run-down appearance of Griswold House They enjoyed low rent and beautiful scenery which was what drew them to be together there year after year encouraging each other and going on to sell more and more paintings valued by city people Florence Griswold's home and story can be experienced today by visitors to Miss Florence's house After her death in 1937 her artist friends founded The Florence Griswold Museum located in Old Lyme Connecticut www.florencegriswoldmuseum.org This museum tells the story of Miss Florence's days living amongst her many cats and dogs two or three hosting famous artists and even a future president of the United States
