Mobilizing U. S. Industry in World War II Alan L. Gropman, 1996 Contents Mobilization activities before Pearl Harbor day education for mobilization interwar planning for industrial mobilization mobilizing for war 1939 1941 the war production board the controlled materials plan the office of war mobilization U S production in World War II balancing military overcoming raw material scarcities maritime construction people mobilization Rosie the Riveter conclusions Appendix production of selected munitions items the war agencies of the Executive Branch of the Federal Government The Economic Consequences of U.S. Mobilization for the Second World War Alexander J. Field, 2022-10-18 A reminder that war is not always or even generally good for long term growth Many believe that despite its destructive character war ultimately boosts long term economic growth For the United States this view is often supported by appeal to the experience of the Second World War understood as a triumph of both production and productivity Alexander Field shows that between 1941 and 1945 manufacturing productivity actually declined depressed by changes in the output mix and resource shocks from enemy action including curtailed access to natural rubber and on the Eastern Seaboard petroleum The war forced a shift away from producing goods in which the country had a great deal of experience toward those in which it had little Learning by doing was only a partial counterbalance to the intermittent idleness and input hoarding that characterized a shortage economy and dragged down productivity The conflict distorted human and physical capital accumulation and once it ended America stopped producing most of the new goods The war temporarily shut down basic scientific research and the ongoing development of civilian goods U S world economic dominance in 1948 Field shows was due less to the experience of making war goods and more to the country's productive potential in 1941 History of Military Mobilization in the United States Army, 1775-1945 Marvin A.
